Byrd Attacks Roosevelt's Defense of Arms Output

Senator Denies He Was Far Wrong In Maintaining Situation Is Grave

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday clashed with Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, on progress of the national defense effort.

In a Hyde Park statement that drew prompt retort from the Virginian, the President said somebody sold Byrd down the river on his recent arms production figures showing an "appalling" lag in output.

He said that on the average defense production was up to estimates.

Byrd replied that the President's corrections were "minor in consequence" and failed to alter the defense picture. He said Mr. Roosevelt emphasized "the gravity of our national situation" by confirming Byrd's figures on plane production.

Assails "On Order" Talk

"Nobody sold me down the river very far," the Senator told reporters. "We have heard enough about production 'on order.'"

At his Hyde Park conference, the President said he had asked the War Department to check up on figures released Tuesday by Byrd, who charged the program had "miserably failed."

The President was advised, he said, that "unfortunately" the Senator had been misled by somebody and that Byrd's figures were completely inaccurate except for plane production. He compared some of Byrd's figures with those of the department and said they reflected the degree of inaccuracy of the whole picture described by Byrd.

At the Capitol, the Virginia Senator immediately prepared an answer in which he said "wisecracking has its place" but that nobody could so lightly dismiss the preparedness program.

Byrd's Plane Figures Sustained

This is particularly so in view of the new figures offered," said Byrd. "In sustaining my statements in the Senate as to the production of combat planes, the President, in fact, admitted justification for the most serious of my criticisms of the slow production of military equipment."

He said the President in addition to confirming his plane statistics, failed to mention his figures on inadequacy of the Naval and merchant ship programs, both of which he could establish by written proof from the departments concerned. He said he had these figures in writing from the Secre-

Mrs. Fones Given $600 Post Fund

Mrs. Rose Fones, of 416 Third Street Northwest, who was robbed of her life savings of $1167 August 3, celebrated her seventy-fourth birthday last night at a small party at her rooming house. Among her presents was a bank book recording deposits of more than $600 received in contributions from Post readers.

Mrs. Fones cut her birthday cake and smiled, happier than she had been for many a day. She said she couldn't express her gratitude to generous Washingtonians for their aid.

OPM Lacked Faith, So Plants Waited Year for Conversion

Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post.

AT a meeting June 18 of the OPM defense contract service, attended by representatives of scores of large and small businesses, the idea was driven home that civilian concerns must undertake defense work.

The businessmen were willing. They asked, only, "Where are the orders?"

Whereat Col. A. B. Quinton, an ordnance department field officer, arose. He announced, flatly, that of all the companies known to the ordnance department as suitable for and capable of supplying ordnance items, only 20 per cent would be needed. He explained why.

That 20 per cent, Col. Quinton said, were considered adequate to meet this year's demands and those of the next.

But the figures are these as of the end of June:

Of some 5 billion dollars appropriated for Army ordnance items—"shooting stuff," not plant construction—contracts for only 55 per cent had been let. The other 45 per cent, mainly for ammunition and Lease-Lend materials, had not even been started on its work; no orders had been placed to translate it from money to guns.

The Figures Have Another Story to Tell

Of about 8 billion dollars appropriated for Army and Navy ordnance and combat vehicles, only 5 billion dollars worth of contracts had been made.

And how are we doing with the 3 billions of Army ordnance funds that had been placed under contract? The Army expects less than half of it to come back in the form of guns and shells and tanks by the end of the year.

A BETTER gauge of progress than the numerical totals cited by Senator Byrd and the President at another place in this paper are these data relating to requirements and the extent to which they have been met and will be met:

Of tanks and trucks and jeeps and scout cars, we had, as of July 1, between 9 and 10 per cent of ultimate requirements for ourselves and export to Germany's foes. Not until early next year shall we have more than half of the total requirements.

We had from 6 to 10 per cent of total requirements of field artillery. By the end of the year we shall still have less than one-third of the amounts required. By the middle of 1942—a year from now—we shall be half supplied.

We were similarly situated with respect to antiaircraft guns. By the end of the year we shall still have only one-fourth of total requirements, according to Army expectations.

Finally, a full year from now, the Army expects deliveries on less than three-fourths of even the relatively small amounts now under contract.

Wherein OPM Actions Belie OPM Words

To tap the climax, with 5 billion dollars of existing appropriations still not under contract, the ordnance department is about to be deluged with 3 billions more from an appropriation bill now pending, and another 4 or 5 billions from a new Lease-Lend bill.

Are 20 per cent of the "suitable" ordnance suppliers adequate, in the light of these figures?

AS yesterday's article in this series showed, "adequacy" for the gigantic armament effort that is required of America can be nothing less than full utilization of, and "all out" production by, every metal working shop, durable goods factory and machine works in the country which can possibly be converted to defense production.

But the National Defense Advisory Commission and the Office of Production Management, despite the sententious motto of their Tools Division, "Nothing Is Impossible," have long and loudly insisted that such conversion is possible only to a very limited degree.

The contention is so important, and the problem of conversion is so basic, that it deserves a little discussion.

The only thing wrong with the OPM contention is that it is simply not true.

FOR proof, one needs only observe that now, after 14 months of saying "It can't be done," the OPM is holding meeting after meeting with industry after industry, discussing with them what new defense work they undertake.

Necessity Shows That It Can Be Done

OPM Chief William S. Knudsen recently declared he was leaving to the "ingenuity" of the auto industry the problem of how to compensate for curtailed civilian production, cut by raw material shortages, with armament work.

Apparently it can be done.

Or, for an even simpler proof, there is the convincing fact that many individual firms from the durable goods industries are already making defense items—in their existing plants, with their existing equipment, machine tools and labor.

Packard and General Motors machine shops are making some defense

A seven-year-old boy running to meet a playmate was struck and killed by a hit-and-run driver in the 400 block of I Street Northwest, about 4 p. m. yesterday.

The victim, Francis Stanley Armitage, of 905 Fifth Street Northwest, was hurled 38 feet by the impact, which tore both shoes from his feet. He was dead when an ambulance from Emergency Hospital arrived. The body was taken to the Morgue.

Only meager information about the car and driver was obtained by police from witnesses. A broadcast was flashed through Washington and in Maryland and Virginia for a dark-colored, 1935 or 1936 Ford two-door sedan with a white sidewall tire on the rear. It was operated by a slender white man, wearing a white shirt. He was hatless, the broadcast stated.

Rules to Curb Time Buying Start Sept. 1

Payment Plans On 24 Articles, Including Autos, To Be Made Steeper

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Government rules governing installment credit that become effective September 1 were issued by the Federal Reserve Board last night.

Admittedly a blow at the average family purse, in a further attempt to curb inflation, the rules are designed to make it harder to pay off small installment loans and harder to buy on credit 24 types of articles used by almost every home, ranging from automobiles to saxophones, from oil burners to furniture.

Acting under an executive order of President Roosevelt issued August 11, the Board set 18 months as the maximum payment period for the articles listed and ordered down payments ranging from one third on automobiles to 20 per cent on household appliances and 15 per cent on heavy household equipment, such as heaters, furniture and pianos.

The rules meant that only seven shopping days remain before a death warrant takes effect for "easy payment" terms.

The board decreed also that installment loans of $1000 or less, shall not run for longer than 18 months.

Many Articles Affected

Any business or banking firm that is in the business of extending installment credit must secure a license to do business by December 31. Prepared license forms will be available at Federal Reserve banks and their branches.

The rules do not apply to cash transactions nor to any transaction concluded before September 1, except if renewed or expanded later.

The following are the articles listed by the Reserve Board, the prescribed down payment and the maximum length of the installment contract:

Automobiles, including taxicabs, either new or used—one-third of purchase price down and 18 months to pay the balance.

Aircraft, power-driven boats and their motors, outboard motorboats and motorcycles—one-third down and 18 months to pay.

Furnaces Affected

Refrigerators (less than 12 cubic feet rated capacity), household washing machines, household ironers, household suction cleaners, cooking stoves with less than seven burners, household electric dishwashers, room-unit air conditioners, household sewing machines, radio receiving sets, phonographs or combinations, musical instruments composed principally of metals—20 per cent down and 18 months to pay.

Household furnaces and heating units for furnaces (includes oil burners, gas conversion burners and

Reds Pushed Back by Finns, Hold Nazis Before Leningrad; Iran Prepares to Resist British

Teheran Expects Crisis on Demand Nazis Be Ousted; Army Leave Stopped

Iran Will Fight

Showdown Near

Teheran, Iran, Aug. 22.—Iran delivered to the British Minister today a formal answer to demands for expulsion of German technicians, and informed sources said the reply was substantially the same as a verbal one which the British had called unsatisfactory.

Iranians believed a showdown was imminent.

The Teheran radio broadcast military marches, featuring the poetic account in the Book of Kings of 5000 years of Persian history. Traditionally these marches are sung by troops going into front-line battle.

An official order canceled the usual one-month leave and sent 1072 newly graduated army officers to active duty on Iran's borders, where 120,000 troops stood guard against attack.

Among the officers was Prince Ali Riza, second son of Riza Kahn Pahlevi, Shah of Iran, who has called upon the army to be ready for "every sacrifice."

British Claims Disputed

Iranians declared the British-Russian demand for expulsion of German technicians was merely window dressing for plans of the two countries to invade Iran and establish a liaison by which British troops could join Russian forces on the German-Russian front.

Answering British claims that 3000 Germans are in key posts in Iran, an official police statement said there were only 640 male Germans in the country.

In the last 45 days 50 of these were said to have left.

The Iranian government was reported to have stressed in its reply to Britain a readiness to reduce the total of German technicians whenever German contracts in State-owned railroads and communications industries expire.

Sixty Americans There

It was said to have asserted, however, that as a neutral, independent power Iran was unable to understand why she should be forced to incur the risk of diplomatic rupture with Germany which might result from mass expulsions.

Nazi Prisoners in France Made Hostages, Liable to Death

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Unoccupied France (Saturday), Aug. 23.—All Frenchmen arrested by or for German authorities in France will be held as hostages for the assassination of a high German officer two days ago, it was decreed in a German military order effective today.

For any further acts, hostages will be shot in numbers according to the German view of the gravity of the offense, said the order issued by Lieut. Gen. von Schaumburg.

It was not made clear whether the order applied to the 6000 Jews arrested by the Germans in Paris yesterday, or to any of the 150,000 persons who have been deprived of their liberty since last May in all of France.

The assassination on Thursday, however, followed the recent demonstrations attributed to Communists and the mass arrests of Jews, Communists and De Gaulle "Free French" sympathizers in workers' sections of Paris.

Identity of the victim was not mentioned, but it was reported in Vichy that he was a colonel of the German Paris staff who was stabbed to death in the subway.

News of the assassination and of the German action followed word from reliable informants in this capital of unoccupied France last night that the Petain government had decided to impose the death penalty for Communist activity and was preparing a series of decrees to bring the unoccupied zone into line with German measures against the growing ferment.

Free Frenchman Executed

Vichy, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Germany was reported angered at the French government tonight for its failure to halt the wave of sabotage against the French railroad system, threatening the German rear during the Russian campaign.

Another execution to discourage the rising tide of discontent in both occupied and unoccupied zones—the third in two days—was announced by posters in Paris today. The victim was Jose Roig, shot for recruiting volunteers for Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Free French leader.

Mexico Orders Nazis to Close Consulates

Recalls Its Agents In German-Held Lands; Closure Effective Sept. 1

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Aug. 22.—The foreign office tonight ordered all 15 German consulates in Mexico closed by September 1 and simultaneously instructed all Mexican consuls in German-occupied Europe to withdraw by the same date.

A bulletin from the foreign ministry said this action was taken as a result of the "act not friendly" of Germany in ordering Mexico to withdraw her consular representative from German-occupied Paris.

Berlin Acted First

The order to close the German consulates—similar to action already taken by the United States and Cuba—followed the recent strain on Mexico's relations with Berlin which was caused by the German request that Mexico protest against Washington's anti-Axis blacklist.

The decision of the German government to close Mexico's Paris office, as well as honorary consulates in six other Nazi-controlled cities, by September 1 caused "profound surprise" here, the foreign office statement said. The honorary consulates are in Norway, Belgium, Holland and Occupied France.

The Mexican government, therefore, has decided to go beyond the German instructions, the statement added, by closing Mexico's consulate in Hamburg and all honorary consulates still open in Germany.

The United States ordered all

Kearny Strike Truce Now Up To U. S. Steel

Shipyard Head Goes To Parent Company For a Decision

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Decision on future action in the two-week old strike of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. appeared to rest last night with the board of directors of the United States Steel Co., of which Federal's key defense shipyard is a subsidiary.

It was learned yesterday that "an answer was expected" from the management of the huge steel company on whether its subsidiary, at Kearny, N. J., loaded with 493 million dollars of naval and Maritime Commission construction, would accept a National Defense Mediation Board recommendation to grant a maintenance of membership agreement to the C. I. O. shipbuilding workers.

In the meantime, according to Assistant Navy Secretary Ralph A. Bard, Navy Secretary Knox had been in communication with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park. Knox, it was assumed, had relayed to the President the report of John Green, president of the shipbuilders union, that conferences with L. H. Korndorff, Federal Shipbuilding Co. president, had collapsed late Thursday night and that the matter was again in Mr. Roosevelt's hands.

Earlier in the day at a Hyde Park press conference, the President said the Government did not want to take over the yards if it could be

By the Associated Press

The Finns claimed last night to have captured Kiviniemi on the Karelian Isthmus, thus pushing down to within less than 50 miles by rail from Leningrad, but it appeared that in the still more critical area south of the city there had been no material worsening of the Red position against complementary German offensives.

The early morning Soviet communique said merely "our troops continued to fight stubbornly with the enemy on the entire front" and reported no new withdrawals. Five German transports bringing up reinforcements in the Baltic were sunk or run aground, it added.

Russian reverses above the "cradle of the Socialist Revolution"—so the Bolsheviks described Leningrad in vowing bitterly before the memory of Nikolai Lenin that the invaders should never take it—were said by the Finnish command to have been tremendous.

It was asserted that five Red divisions had been destroyed or routed; that Kakisalmi, a port on the northwest shore of Lake Ladoga and itself about 75 miles northwest of Leningrad, also had been taken; that the important Red outpost of Viipuri (Viborg), 32 miles west of Kiviniemi, had been flanked; that 62 miles of the northeast shore of the Vuoksi River, which runs southeastward down the Isthmus, was in Finnish hands.

Old Finnish Line Smashed

In accomplishing all this, the Finnish Command declared, a system of Russian defenses built upon Finland's old Mannerheim Line was smashed.

Dispatches from Helsinki acknowledged that on the lower isthmus the Finns had yet to meet strong Soviet defenses and formidable natural obstacles.

It was below Leningrad where the showdown approached against German columns thrusting northeastward and almost due north. The city's airports, the Germans said, were under heavy aerial assault in preparation for the coming effort to storm it.

Destruction Threatened

[The United Press in New York reported hearing a German radio announcement that the high command had decided to destroy Leningrad.]

The Soviet general staff's communique yesterday afternoon reported that fighting continued in the old areas of Kingisepp and Novgorod, the one 75 miles to the southwest of Leningrad and the other 100 miles south, and from this Moscow observers drew the inference that the Germans had made no substantial gain.

James Roosevelt Takes House Here

Capt. James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, has rented the two-story white stucco house at Franklin Street and Connecticut Avenue, Kensington, Md., it was learned yesterday.

Roosevelt, a commissioned officer in the Marine Corps, is on duty here in the office of Col. William J. Donovan, coordinator of information. The Kensington house, known locally as the Goode Place, has 14 rooms and a three-car garage.

The President's son was recently married to Miss Romelle Schneider, of Rochester, Minn., his second marriage.

Ickes to Clarify Gas Mixup Today; U. S. Inquiry Hinted

A statement "to relieve the confusion" attending Federal measures for alleviating the East Coast's oil shortage was promised for today by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes' office as President Roosevelt indicated last night he would not object to a congressional investigation to determine if the shortage is "phony," as charged by some legislators.

Promise of clarification of the situation came from a spokesman in Ickes' office amid conflicting statements on the existence of idle tank cars which could be employed to ship petroleum to the East.

It is expected to clear up the mystery surrounding yesterday's conferences between Federal control officials and H. W. Dodge, chairman of the District No. 1 Petroleum Marketing Committee.

Parley Follows Meeting

The conferences followed a two-day meeting of the marketing committee in New York which resulted, according to the Associated Press, in agreement to recommend to Ickes that gasoline sales in the next fortnight be restricted to 60 per cent of the July sales.

In Washington, tension over the gasoline situation was eased as motorists discovered they had less trouble than anticipated in filling their fuel needs.

More than half of the chain-owned and independent stations sampled by The Post said they were not limiting sales. This in spite of recommendation Thursday night by Washington Retail Gasoline Dealers, Inc., that pump operators cut their volume by 20 per cent.

Acting Defense Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies announced that there may be thousands of idle railroad tank cars ready to be pressed into service to bring oil to the East, but "no one seems to be able to produce them when we ask that this be done."

He said the coordinator's office had made attempts to locate cars with tank car companies, railroads, trade associations and the oil industry, without avail. He issued a recommendation that the oil industry take immediate steps to ascertain how many tank cars are idle and to press them into service without delay.

17,557 Cars Termed Available

Whereupon J. J. Pelly, president of the Association of American Railroads, said that as of day before yesterday there were 17,557 tank cars throughout the country that could move 200,000 barrels of oil daily to the East. He added:

"All they have got to do is order them and load them and we will

Leningrad Invites Destruction, Nazis Say; Barricades Up, City's Militia Drills for Siege

Berlin Admits Reds Retain Foothold In Dnieper Bend

By the Associated Press

Berlin, (Saturday), Aug. 23.—The German air force is smashing in great force at airfields and roads around Leningrad to soften Soviet opposition for approaching German armies while new and bitter encirclement battles are developing on the central front, it was reported today.

D. N. B. dispatches from the front declared eight airports in the Leningrad zone were under assault by waves of bombers. Thirty-five Soviet planes were said to have been destroyed on the ground and 16 in air battles.

Other bombers were said to have destroyed a number of bridges northeast of Lake Ilmen, just south of captured Novgorod. Russian motorized columns on the roads were said to have been broken up.

To Destroy City

[The German radio, the United Press reported from New York, said that the high command has decided on the "destruction" of Leningrad. ["The Soviet government decided to defend this city to the death," the radio was quoted. "We take note of this and we declare that when the city is completely destroyed the Bolsheviks will have no right to complain. The responsibility will be theirs."]

Informed sources said fighting in the Gomel sector of the central front was becoming more intense and extensive. They declared that small groups of Soviet troops which had been encircled by advanced German groups now were annihilated.

Difficulties Acknowledged

Earlier an authorized German source acknowledged that "islands of opposition" remained well behind the German lines and that the Red army was throwing fresh reserves into the frontal fight. It was stated that while the contest "is not yet decided, we nevertheless are entering the third month of the war with full confidence in the future."

Vast Russian losses in men, material and industrial areas were announced officially yesterday.

The high command listed Russian losses at 1,250,000 prisoners, 14,000 tanks, 15,000 cannon, 11,250 planes, and important raw material and industrial areas and declared "operations are in full progress on the entire front." Counting killed and captured, Berlin sources asserted this meant at least 5,050,000 Russian soldiers have been put out of action.

German invasion forces were described as "unweakened."

Incidentally, it was announced today that qualified men from 17 to 45 may volunteer for military and other special services in the black-uniformed SS. Elite Corps, an association of volunteers known as Adolf Hitler's bodyguard.

SS. (Schutz Staffel) volunteers accepted may serve for duration of the "emergency" rather than the normal term of 12 years.

The SS. forces are among those now besieging Odessa and have been in heavy action since the Russian campaign started. There have been no announcements of losses for any German units. (The Russians, however, frequently have reported destruction of SS. formations.)

Still Battle West of Dnieper

Elaborating on the communique, the military spokesman said the most bitter fighting centered in the Dnieper River bend in the Ukraine, east of the Pinsk marshes and east of Smolensk in the central zone, and near Leningrad in the north.

Although Germans have claimed the entire western Ukraine for days past, the commentator said Soviet "islands" existed in the Dnieper bend and east of the Pinsk marshes.

In reply to a question whether hostilities still were in progress as far west as the Pinsk area of former Poland, which is 220 miles west of German-captured Gomel, he shrugged and conceded, "Possibly."

The Russians were acknowledged in competent quarters to be partly holding in the battle for bridgeheads of the lower Dnieper River with fresh but middle-aged reserves.

These men fought stubbornly and led a tank attack from the bridgeheads, DNB said, but the Germans repulsed the thrust and left the battlefield "strewn with Russian dead."

There were no reports from Odessa, the Black Sea port which has been under German air and artillery bombardment for several days, but military sources said the Germans had occupied Ochakov, 45 miles eastward.

Red Army Checks Drive of Germans Toward Metropolis

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), Aug. 23.—Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's northern Red army was fighting firmly and stubbornly early today against the Germans and Finns on a vast arc of defenses girdling Leningrad while behind it a people's army erected barricades in the city's streets and drilled on the banks of the Neva River.

The midnight Soviet communique made no mention of the specific battle sectors, merely saying that "our troops continued to fight stubbornly with the enemy on the entire front."

In the Baltic west of the city the Russians reported that Red ships attacked five German transports, sinking two and running three aground. Two escorting motorboats also were sunk, the communique said.

Put Losses at 700,000

In a supplementary communique reviewing two months of war, German losses in dead and wounded were placed at more than two million, compared to Russian losses of 700,000 in dead, wounded and missing.

German mechanical losses were placed at 8000 tanks, 10,000 guns and 7200 aircraft, compared to 550 Russian tanks lost, 7500 guns and 4500 aircraft.

Several German tank divisions, numerous infantry divisions and 15 motorized divisions have been smashed, the communique said.

Leningrad's men and women held mass meeting after mass meeting to declare the Nazis "will find their graves upon the approaches of our city," as the attacker did in Russia's civil war. The women said they would fight with their husbands and brothers to the last drop of blood.

Antiaircraft guns roared in the outskirts, troop trucks raced through the streets; factory workers stayed at their posts for 48 or 72 hours. One dispatch to Izvestia said the Gulf of Finland was aglow at night with fires from enemy ships set ablaze by Soviet naval and aircraft.

Optimism Returns

Observers here saw signs of slight improvement generally in the critical Red military position.

This qualified optimism was expressed in Moscow after the afternoon communique of the Soviet command had reported continuing fighting in unchanged theaters about Kingisepp and Novgorod southwest and south of Leningrad as well as in the sector about Gomel on the lower central front.

The fact that for the fourth day the Nazis apparently were being held in the same areas about Leningrad was interpreted in some quarters as strongly indicative that they were being substantially checked.

As to the Gomel sector military dispatches reported that despite the acknowledged Russian abandonment of the town itself the Russian armies of the center still were counter-attacking, while mounted Red detachments were driving deep behind the German lines.

Cavalry Attacking

Specific news of this movement was scarce, but among the meager announcements of its progress was one that a German division had been hard hit under an artillery attack, and another that in a single local encounter Russian cavalrymen had killed more than 400 Nazis in a saber charge.

While the midday war bulletin made no mention of the situation in the lower Ukraine, other official accounts told of savage fighting to check German advances across the River "N" (presumably the Dnieper). For example, it was reported that in one area Russian monitors and cutters had smashed a bridge the instant it was completed by German sappers, costing the invaders nine tanks and 800 men and that by firing upon and ramming German boats they had destroyed 26 heavily laden with German troops.

Other Transports Sunk

(A Soviet broadcast heard in London announced that a fleet of German transports carrying reinforcements to the Ukraine front was routed by Soviet bombers in three sweeps along the Rumanian coast. Two transports were reported sunk, a third set afire and others hit.)

Dispatches from Leningrad told how a great city of more than three million inhabitants was preparing for such a siege as the world had barely known.

Militiamen not staying to defend the city's streets and factories were reported marching off to the more distant front by tens of thousands.

Tank crews of the Red army were declared to have held a meeting just outside Leningrad, pushing their huge machines to the edge of a forest to hear the often reiterated proclamation of Klementi Voroshilov, the Soviet commander of the northwest, that the city must be held at any cost.

This was the published slogan:

"The enemy must find his grave. The city of Lenin (one of the Bolshevik founders) will never be given up."

Much was made of the city's history as "the cradle of the great socialist revolution."

German bombers were attacking ceaselly, trying to destroy the airports outside Leningrad, but it was claimed that in 17 consecutive raids not a single bomb had fallen in the city proper.

Soviet Line Cracked, Finns Say; Claim Key City Near Leningrad

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Aug. 22.—The Finnish High Command announced tonight its forces had driven within 50 miles of Leningrad, breaking the defense the Russians had erected on the ruins of Finland's former Mannerheim Line and smashing or routing five Soviet divisions in battles still progressing on the Karelian Isthmus and around Lake Ladoga.

Then entire northeast shore of the Vuoksi river, which twists down the isthmus, was declared in Finnish hands from Enso, on the present Finnish border to Kivinemi, 62 miles to the southeast.

Linked by raid with Leningrad, Kiviniemi is less than 50 miles from that big Russian city and only 12 miles from the old Russian-Finnish border.

Finn forces in that same area, between the Vuoksi and Lake Ladoga, swung up from the south and captured Kakisalmi, the big former Finnish lake port, the High Command said.

Military observers said the Russians apparently were surprised by the attack from that direction, which cut off all possibility of retreat by land.

Former Finnish Territory

All the area of the fighting is territory which was Finland before the March, 1940, peace which ended the winter warfare with the Soviet Union.

On the Vuoksi front, the Finns said they dispersed the Red army's 265th Division and threw back the 115th to the west bank with severe losses. These two were described as Moscow divisions which had been rushed up to bolster a faltering Soviet defense.

Farther north on the isthmus, the Finns said they had pushed back the 142d and 198th Divisions with heavy losses and had the remainder surrounded on the island of Kilpelansaari, just east of Hiitola.

Thee troops are trying to escape by boat but are trapped under constant Finnish bombardment, the Finns stated.

In the same area, many smaller Russian detachments have been encircled and destroyed in trying to rescue their fellows, it was added.

Northwest of Lake Ladoga, at a point below Sortavala, the Finns claimed they had virtually wiped out the Red army's 168th Division, the remnants fleeing by boat 20 miles out into the lake to take refuge on the island of Valamo, site of a medieval monastery and once a popular tourist resort. This division lost 300 automobiles, hundreds of horses and much other equipment, and many of its boats were sunk, the Finns declared.

Kiviniemi Strategic Stronghold

But it was the capture of Kiviniemi which had the greatest appeal to Finns. That point was a strategic stronghold on the Mannerheim Line and withstood a three-month pounding in the 1939-40 War before the Russians finally crushed through elsewhere.

Its recapture practically flanks the Rusian forces at Viipuri, the former Finnish city to the Northeast, and places them under threat of encirclement.

However, the Finns acknowledge that the road on south to Leningrad is a difficult one, despite the railroad.

The whole lower Karelian Isthmus is described here as a formidable series of fortifications bolstered by such natural obstacles as countless streams, small lakes, swamps, cliffs and dense forests.

It also enjoys the protection in its southernmost reaches of the Red fleet in the Gulf of Finland.

the United States Army long before the panzer divisions of the German army had been heard of.

Thirteen months ago, after the Nazi blitzkrieg had crushed France, he was given authority to organize the armored force, with headquarters at Fort Knox, Ky.

Two armored divisions had been formed by last October, when illness forced Gen. Chaffee to go on leave. He returned to duty in February and saw two more armored divisions organized before failing health again obliged him to leave his command in July.

Gen. Chaffee will be buried in Arlington beside his father, Lieut. Gen. Adna Rfi Chaffee, Chief of Staff from 1904 to 1906.

High Officials to Attend

Representatives of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff, now on the West Coast, Armored force officers from Fort Knox and the field armies, Maj. Gen. D. H. Pratt, of the British Army, and many other military and civil officials will attend the funeral.

Active pallbearers will be eight cavalry enlisted men who have served under Gen. Chaffee.

A War Department spokesman said yesterday that Gen. Chaffee's death was caused by his insistence on returning to work after a siege of pneumonia. "Gen. Chaffee sacrificed himself in the making of the armored force," he said.

It was in 1930 that Gen. Chaffee delivered an address at the Army War College in which he predicted that the next war might be decided by highly mobile, heavily armored divisions of overwhelming firepower.

Finally Wins Recognition

Many officers, especially his fellow cavalry men, considered Chaffee's ideas too visionary, but in 1931 he was named executive officer of the first mechanized cavalry force at Fort Knox.

From 1934 to 1936, as chief of the general staff's budge and legislative planning bureau, he was a persistent advocate of bigger appropriations for the Air Corps and for experiments in mechanization.

Gen. Chaffee returned to Fort Knox in 1936 as commander of the mechanized Seventh Cavalry Brigade, then the only unit of its type in the American Army.

Gen. Chaffee was born in Junction City, Kan. As a boy of 15 he went to China with his father, who was in command of the American troops sent there during the Boxer Rebellion. He was graduated from West Point and commisisoned as a second lieutenant in 1908.

An expert horseman and polo player, he was a member of the American Army team at the International Horse Show in London in 1911. He studied at the French cavalry school in Saumur the following year.

He was a captain and West Point instructor at the time of America's entry into the World War. He served as a division adjutant and chief of staff and a corps operations officer. After the Armistice he commanded a regiment in the Army of Occupation in Germany.

Accorded High Praise

His citation for the Distinguished Service Medal praised Gen. Chaffee for "keen energy and wise discernment" in handling "grave responsibilities" as corps operations officer during the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

Gen. Chaffee is survived by his wife, the former Ethel Warren Ruff, of Atlanta, Ga., whom he married in 1908, and one child, Edna R. Chaffee, 3d.

Honorary pallbearers at today's services will include Senator Hill, of Alabama; Representative Snyder, of Pennsylvania; Maj. Gen. Charles L. Scott, commanding officer of the Second Armored Corps; Brig. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, chief of the Army Bureau of Public Relations; Col. Sereno E. Brett, Chief of Staff of the Armored Force; J. W. Riley, of Bell Haven, Conn.; H. C. Stebbins and Ray Middleton, of Washington.

Coast Guard Will Requisition Danish Vessel

President Roosevelt has authorized the Coast Guard to requisition the Danish training ship, the Danmark, for use in training Coast Guard officer cadets at New London, Conn.

The Danmark, which has been at Jacksonville, Fla., since about the time when Denmark was invaded, is a sailing vessel. It is expected to cost the Coast Guard about $500,000.

The order applied to all foreign training ships in American ports, but the Danmark is the only one here.

The President also ordered the Coast Guard to turn the 175-foot cutter, Redwing, over to the Navy at New York.

The Treasury said that whatever amount is paid for the Danmark would go into a blocked account credited to Denmark.

Reds Report Arrest Of Dr. Schacht

London, Aug. 22 (INS)Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former head of the German Reichsbank both before and after the Nazis came to power, has been arrested, it was asserted over the Moscow radio tonight, according to Reuters British News Agency.

Pravda—Communist Party organ—quoting a letter from Zurich, Switzerland, stated Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had been removed from office by the Nazis because the German General Staff held him responsible for their failure on the Eastern Front.

Officer Dies As Finnish Ship Burns at New York

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—The second ship fire of the week here did an estimated $50,000 damage today to the 4956-ton freighter Aurora and took the life of the ship's chief officer, who suffocated in his bunk while launches rescued 18 other members of the crew.

Meantime, the death toll in Monday's Brooklyn waterfront fire, which destroyed the Cuba mail line cargo ship Panuco, mounted to 30 with the recovery of 11 more bodies from the East River. At least two more men are missing.

The Finnish Consul General, T. O. Vahervuori, and police said there was no evidence of sabotage in today's fire, but agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who also investigated, declined comment.

Roosevelt, Byrd Clash On Defense

tary of the Navy and Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission.

The Virginian again cited "the imperative need for a one-man head for all defense agencies of the Government" to stop "the confusion and conflicting authority" between agencies which now exist.

"My only desire is to be constructive in our defense program and in giving aid to England" said Byrd, adding that if he served no other purpose than to bring out the facts something would be accomplished.

In his Hyde Park statement, the President said certain production information could not be made public, but he cited some figures in taking issue with Byrd's.

Byrd had said that not a single tank had gone to England.

The President said hundreds of tanks of modern design produced within the last year had been delivered to the British and many had figured effectively in Egyptian fighting.

Byrd said last night he was technically accurate in saying no tanks had gone to England, but that "I now find that about 200 light 12-ton tanks were sent to Africa for use by the British."

Not a single medium tank has been sent to the British, said Byrd, and not a single heavy 60-ton tank is on order.

The Senator said Tuesday that new 90-millimeter antiaircraft guns were to be delivered at a ratio of only four per month in the last four months of this year.

Refers to Future

The President said the program calls for delivery of 61 of these guns monthly and the department believes that figure will be reached.

Byrd replied last night that the President speaks here "of future production" but whether 4 or 61, either figure is "woefully inadequate". He repeated that not sufficient anti-aircraft guns are on hand to protect one single seacoast city.

Figures at Variance

The Senator had said that only 15 57-millimeter antitank guns were being turned out each month.

The President said July deliveries totaled 72 of these guns and the figure will expand to 160, in September to 260, and October to 320.

The Senator had said that only 15 81-millimeter mortars were produced monthly.

The President replied that the July output of these guns was 221, that this month's production will climb to 340, and September and October production will be even higher.

Byrd said last night that as to alleged discrepancies between their figures on the 37-millimeter antitank guns and on the 81-millimeter mortars, "it will be noted, except for July, that the President's figures are for future production, and in either set of figures a dangerous delay in production of very essential equipment is shown."

Calls for Action

"Whether the guns produced are a few more or a few less alters the picture but little," said Byrd. "Taking the President's statement from the best standpoint, we are not preparing our defense quickly; we are not giving the aid we should to England. Something constructive must be done immediately."

When a reporter asked the President if he felt over-all production had been satisfactory, he said it had never been satisfactory, that in some things it had lagged and in some things gone ahead of estimates, assuming the original estimates were right. Some of the estimates might have been too low and some too high, he suggested. But on the whole, he said, production has averaged up to estimates.

Denies Progressive Decline

In conceding that Byrd's figures on plane production were essentially correct, he said it was not strictly true that production of military planes had progressively declined in May, June and July. He said more training planes left the assembly lines, and the manufacture of combat planes remained steady while designs were changed and new designs were tested.

To the President's estimate from memory that the July plane schedule was 1500. Byrd replied that "as a matter of fact, the July schedule was 1656 and fell 200 short of this schedule, and we produced in total less planes in July than in June. He said the Administration had been issuing gross figures for plane production, lumping training planes, which can be built quickly, with combat planes, which take longer.

Byrd Cites Further Figures

The Senator said Tuesday that two years after the war began, America produced in July only 700 combat planes, of which less than 300 were bombers, chiefly light; that less than 60 of the 4-engine heavy bombers were produced; and that only 35 dive bombers were produced in May. Last night he said the President's Hyde Park statement "appears to admit this."

He asked if the President disputed the source of his information that only 53 merchant vessels of 2000 gross tons or over were built and delivered in 1940, or that only 105 cargo vessels and tankers would be built in 1941. He exhibited a letter from Admiral Land to confirm his figures.

And he asked if the President disputed the source of his Tuesday breakdown on only 28 major naval vessels to be added to the Navy in 1941. He said he had that in writing from Secretary Knox.

Urges Strike Curb

Byrd told reporters the President failed to mention the five million man-days lost since January 1 by strikes in defense industries, though strikes are starting up again, and asked: "What action will the President take to recommend to Congress a curb of this bottleneck?"

He said the President had likewise failed to mention the necessity for working longer hours to produce defense needs, or the necessity for placing overlapping defense authorities under one head.

In his Hyde Park press comference, the President replied sharply to contentions by Representative Fish, isolationist New York Republican who represents Roosevelt's own district, that America would lose markets and suffer economically from a German defeat.

Newsmen told the President of the assertion made by Fish at an America First rally in Philadelphia. So he (Fish) thinks we wouldn't lose if Germany won, the President shot back.

He said he did not think any comment that could be printed was necessary. But he recalled the late Senator Borah's claim in July, 1939, that his information was better than Secretary Hull's and that there would be no war in Europe that year.

War broke shortly after Borah's statement. The President remarked that Borah had information that in many ways was superior to that of some people making speeches. Fish, he implied, was more wrong than Borah.

Text of Senator Byrd's Reply

(Text of Senator Harry F. Byrd's reply to President Roosevelt's statement from Hyde Park with respect to national defense.)

Wisecracking has its place, but President Roosevelt, by his statement today, emphasizes the gravity of our national situation, and I do not think anyone can dismiss lightly our preparedness program with the statement that "somebody told Senator Byrd down the river on the figures in all categories but planes." This is particularly so in view of the new figures offered. In sustaining my statements in the Senate as to the production of combat planes, the President, in fact, admitted justification for the most serious of my criticisms of the slow production of military equipment.

Fighting airplanes are the first line of defense of this country, and they are the most essential military equipment to be furnished Great Britain. Therefore, their production constitutes this country's foremost responsibility.

I said in my speech in the Senate that two years after the European war began we produced in July only 700 combat planes, of which less than 300 were bombers, chiefly light, while we produced less than 60 of the four-engine heavy bombers, and that only 35 dive-bombers were produced in May, 1941. The President's statement today appears to admit this.

The Administration has been issuing gross figures for plane production, lumping training and combat planes. Training planes can be built quickly in mass production, and until my speech in the Senate no breakdown had been published showing that production of combat planes was so inadequate and that production for July was only 200 more combat planes than in January, and that July production was less than June productoin.

With these figures admitted, no controversy exists with respect to the plane production, and it is for this country to judge the adequacy of this production. Our production is far less than Germany's monthly combat-plane production; in fact, about one-third of the German monthly production as estimated by some Government sources.

The President, speaking from memory, said he understood the plane schedule for July was 1,500. As a matter of fact, the July schedule was 1656 and fell 200 short of this schedule, and we produced in total less planes in July than in June.

In my Senate speech I was careful to say the figures were "accurate in all essentials but, of course, may be approximate in some minor details." The defense production and aid to England, costing us thus far 10 billion dollars, can only be judged in proportion to the urgency of the needs and the funds expended.

The President said the Senator's statement as a whole in every single item except planes was as full of discrepancies as those he (the President) had mentioned. Let us see if this is accurately stated.

Merchant Vessels

In my Senate speech I stated that only 53 merchant vessels of 2000 gross tons and over were built in the United States and delivered during the calendar year 1940.

I have in my possession a signed letter from Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

I stated that for the calendar year 1941, only 78 cargo vessels would be constructed and 27 tankers, making a total of 105.

I have in my possession a letter dated May 14 by Admiral Land stating exactly these figures. Does the President dispute this source?

In the battle of the Atlantic, merchant ships and tankers are vital.

Navy

In my Senate speech I said that only 28 major naval vessels will be added to our Navy in 1941—2 battleships, 17 destroyers, 9 submarines, no aircraft carriers and no cruisers. I have this in writing from the Secretary of the Navy.

Does the President dispute this source?

Antiaircraft Guns

I stated in my Senate speech that except for a few used for experimental purposes, the production of 90-mm. antiaircraft guns, which are the only antiaircraft guns on order which will pierce the new armor and adequately attack high-flying bombers, was negligible for the 2-year period after the beginning of the European war. This the President apparently does not deny but speaks only of future production. I said there were not sufficient antiaircraft guns in America today to protect adequately one single large city on our sea coast.

The President corrects my estimate of four 90-mm. guns monthly and said the program CALLS for 61 monthly for the balance of this year. The future production is, of course problematical, but whether 4-mm. or 64 90-mm. guns are produced monthly for the rest of the year, either figure is woefully inadequate, considering our great need for this particular protective implement of war.

Tanks

In my Senate speech I said we had only 331 tanks on hand September 1, 1940, of which 246 were listed as obsolete and all the others antiquated. I have this in writing from an indisputable Government source. I stated that two years after the beginning of the war the situation had improved only to the extent of the production of a limited number of light tanks and a few medium tanks, and not one single heavy tank had been produced or is on order. I stand upon this statement and have official proof to sustain it.

My statement that no tanks had been sent to England itself was technically accurate, but I now find that about 200 light 12-ton tanks were sent to Africa for use by the British. Not a single medium 32-ton tank, I am told, has been sent to the British anywhere, and not a single heavy 60-ton tank is on order. The light 12-ton tank is comparatively simple to construct.

Regarding my estimate of 15 37-mm. antitank guns in July and the President's estimate of 72, and as to the alleged discrepancy between our figures in 61-mm. mortars, again it will be noted that the President's figures are for future production, and in either set of figures a dangerous delay in the production of very essential equipment is shown.

I say again nearly every training camp is short of training equipment. Only yesterday the newspapers reported that at Preston, Ark., guns were fashioned out of 6-inch logs and that broomstick machine guns were in use. I cannot today vouch for the accuracy of this, but I do know from reports that have come to me from practically all the camps that the equipment is not sufficient to utilize to the proper measure the opportunity for training those who have been drafted at great sacrifice to themselves.

My only desire is to be constructive in our defense program and in giving aid to England. I have supported this program in its entirety and, with many other Americans, I believe the production has lagged dangerously and that the people should be told the truth. I think it is misleading to give defense production in percentages of some previous period when practically no production then occurred, as is being done by Government officials. If my speech does nothing more than to bring out the facts and stimulate public interest in our efforts, I shall feel that something has been accomplished. Whether the guns produced are a few more or a few less alters the picture but little.

The fact remains that the discrepancies the President mentions are minor in consequence. Taking the President's statement from the best standpoint, we are not preparing our defense quickly; we are not giving the aid we should to England. Something constructive must be done immediately.

In discussing our defense program, the President said nothing about the five million man-days that have been lost since January 1 by strikes in defense industries. Strikes are starting up again as a serious menace to the preparedness program. What action will the President take to recommend to Congress a curb of this bottleneck?

He did not mention the confusion and conflicting authority that everyone recognizes now exist in all defense agencies in Washington, or the imperative need for a one-man head for all defense agencies of the Government.

Neither was anything said as to the necessity of working longer hours to produce defense needs, and that we cannot continue longer "business as usual."

The foreign office bulletin emphasized that Mexico "does not recognize, nor for any motive can recognize, the state of things created in Europe by violence."

Neither the German minister, Rudt von Collenberg, nor any official of the German Legation could be reached for comment.

Young Democrats Get Resolutions On U. S. Defense

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 22 (AP).—Resolutions touching on the national defense were introduced today before the resolutions committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, including one that the Government, if necessary, should secure defense bases in Dakar, Cape Verde Islands, Siberia, opposite Alaska, Singapore and "other strategic points considered necessary by military and naval leaders."

Another resolution urged that the President break off diplomatic relations with Vichy and recognize and assist the Free French forces.

Leon Henderson, price control administrator, warned against inflation and told the Young Democrats it was up to them "to establish economic freedom, freedom of work, freedom from want, freedom from fear of being without a job, freedom from fear of old age, freedom from fear of accidents and sickness and death, yes, even freedom from war."

Iran Will Fight Any Attacker, Envoy Declares

Iran's official spokesman in the United States told the United States yesterday that his oil-rich country will resist aggression from any source, and President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull meanwhile disclaimed reports that this country has any commitment to support Great Britain and Russia in their policy toward Iran.

Iran, formerly known as Persia, has been under pressure from London to rid its soil of alleged German "tourists" and there have been reports that Great Britain and Russia were preparing to take armed action together to prevent Iran from becoming a source of danger.

Mohammed Schayesteh, the Iranian Minister, yesterday told Hull and later, reporters, that Iran would fight against Germany, Britain, Russia or any other force—even though the odds were ten to one—to prevent aggression on Iranian soil.

He denied emphatically that there were any German fifth columnists in Iran, declaring that the total German population of his country was 700, and those have been in Iran a long time.

Hull said later at a press conference that information given him by the Iranian envoy tallied with data obtained from other sources.

"No visas have been issued to German tourists for the past two years," said the Minister in commenting on reports from London that there are 3000 German tourists in Iran. "All Germans, as well as other foreigners in Iran, are under careful supervision," he said.

President Roosevelt, at a press conference in Hyde Park, N. Y., scoffed at London reports that he was formally in accord with Britain on her policy toward Iran, but he left the impression that he had no objections to the course pursued in London.

Asked about the reports at a press conference, the President said they illustrated the freedom of the press in London, that they were untrue and that he knew nothing about the matter. Hull backed this up by saying that reports from London that the United States was participating in Anglo-Russian plans regarding Iran were without a basis in truth.

London Gets Reply

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 22.—Britain's leaders considered tonight what they termed the desperate urgency of a war situation which may send British and Russian troops into Iran to guard the Asia Minor oil shed in a common land front against Germany's rush toward the southeast.

Iran's reply to a British-Russian demand for expulsion of 3000 German technicians reported holding key posts there was received in London tonight. Authoritative sources said the government was considering whether it met requirements and added: "No operations have begun."

Russians indicated that if the reply were unsatisfactory British and Russian troops would surge across Iran's borders to oust the Germans. Reports from the Near East said a steady stream of British material and armored cars was moving across Iraq toward the Iranian border.

Britain May Wait Awhile

Some informed sources said, however, that they did not expect an immediate British-Russian demonstration against Iran if the note was deemed unsatisfactory. Instead, they said, Britain might wait a bit in the hope that reports of impending military action would make Iran accede to full British demands.

The Iranian ministry in London would make no comment on the situation today. Tonight its telephone was disconnected "at the subscriber's request."

(In Washington the Iranian Minister said his country would resist aggression from any source.)

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 22.—Germany has reckoned "in all respects" with a British invasion of Iran, a well-informed source close to the foreign office said tonight.

The source added that "the Wilhelmstrasse will not be at all surprised if the reports that Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell has marched into Iran from Beluchistan turn out to be true. It is the Wilhelmstrasse's custom, however, not to comment on any probable consequence of any such situation, which is on the verge of finally being clarified."

Cryptically, the source added: "Berlin has noted with interest the visit of the Iranian Ambassador in Ankara to the Turkish foreign minister."

Farmers Warned On Price Demands

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 22 (AP).—Farmers were warned tonight by Director M. Clifford Townsend of the Office of Agricultural Defense Relations that they would be courting inflation if they demanded more than parity prices for products as a result of the defense emergency.

Boost in Crabmeat Tariff Hits Japan

U. S. Boosts It 7½%; Deal Made to Let Nationals Go Home

President Roosevelt struck an economic blow at Japan's fishing industry yesterday by increasing the tariff on Japanese crabmeat 50 per cent.

Secretary of State Hull, meanwhile, disclosed that an arrangement has been worked out for gradual repatriation of Americans residing in Japan and Japanese anxious to return home from the United States.

The President, by a proclamation naming Japan as our "principal competing country" in the crabmeat industry, increased the tariff on the delicacy, whether fresh, preserved or processed, from 15 per cent to 22½ per cent ad valorem.

A Major Industry

Japan for years has been America's chief foreign source of crabmeat. Fishing is one of Japan's major industries.

Annual imports of crabmeat from Japan for the last few years have averaged three million dollars. The figure last year was $3,289,000.

The President's action was announced in a proclamation issued at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he is spending the weekend.

The tariff increase was regarded as another of a series of steps, such as the freezing of assets initiated several weeks ago when Japan moved into Indo-China.

Japanese Costs Lower

The action was based on an investigation by the Tariff Commission which found, technically, that production costs of crabmeat were much lower in Japan than here.

The tariff increase was expected to affect the fleets of Japanese fishing vessels that have operated off American and Alaskan coasts and have been regarded in some quarters as a threat to American security.

Hull, revealing the repartriation formula, said he would not be surprised if groups of Americans were reported moving from Japan to Shanghai from time to time. From Shanghai they could sail home. Nor would he be surprised, Hull said, by reports of Japanese nationals traveling from the United States to Japan.

U. S. Bombers for Reds A Threat, Tokyo Feels

Tokyo, Aug. 22 (INS).—Grave concern lest American bombing planes shipped across the Pacific for use by Russia against Germany might be held at Vladivostok as a threat to Japan was voiced officially today.

Koh Ishii, spokesman for the foreign office, told correspondents: "The grave concern manifested by the Japanese press over American supplies consigned to Vladivostok voices the viewpoint of the majority of Japanese."

He was unable to say whether the Japanese government had received any American guarantee that American-made bombers would not be held at Vladivostok instead of being shipped on to the Russo-German war front.

[Well informed quarters hinted that Japan already may be conferring with the United States on the matter, United Press reported.]

Koh Ishii said that the possibility of American ships bearing war materials for Russia going through the Tsugaru Straits "cannot be discussed from a legal point of view but only as a matter of feeling."

[The Tsugaru Straits run from the Pacific into the Japan Sea between Japan's two largest islands, Hondo, on which Tokyo is situated, and Yezzo, to the north. They are directly east of Vladivostok.]

Vatican Shuns Stand in U. S. Controversy

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Aug. 22.—The controversy in American Catholic circles over United States Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy's speech and the whole question of the attitude of American Catholics toward the war against Russia is being watched here with the keenest interest, this correspondent was told today.

The Vatican, it was asserted, will make no move one way or another to influence Americans.

One finds an official reserve at the Holy See on the question of the eight points. So far as the general principles of the declaration are concerned there can be do doubt of the Pope's adhesion, since his own five points peace program of Christmas, 1939, followed by the second five points of the succeeding Christmas, and the Pentecost speech of this year can be put side by side with the eight points and show striking resemblances.

On the other hand it is not to be expected that the pontiff could subscribe to a unilateral program of destroying "the Nazi tyranny" and disarming aggressor nations. Moreover, some circles here claim that the pontiff was offered because he was allowed to learn of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting and the eight-point declaration only through Maj. Clement R. Attlee's broadcast from London.

In any event, despite his known sympathies and ideas, it is well understood here that the Pope will convey no advice of any kind to American Catholics regarding their attitude toward the eight points. So far as he is concerned it is an internal question for Americans to decide among themselves.

Pianos and household electric organs—10 per cent down and 18 months to pay.

On materials and services used in repairing, altering or improving urban, surburban, or rural real estate property, the board set 18 months as the maximum period for installment payments, provided the "balance to pay" does not exceed $1,000.

Open Accounts Unaffected

The regulations affect a large share of the Nation's seven billion dollars of outstanding installment credits, but do not affect open accounts (charge accounts), amounting to about three billion dollars.

The regulations were promulgated under a World War law which carries penalties of 10 years in jail, or $10,000 fine, or both, for convicted violators.

The rules were announced in a 23-page regulation that takes general effect September 1, although some portions take effect at varying dates.

Minimum monthly installment payments were set at $5, except for those whose income is seasonal. This requirement takes effect January 1.

Some Credits Excepted

The rules excepted from regulation certain types of credits, including:

Improvement loans on real estate that aggregate more than $1000.

'Withholding' Tax on All Incomes Urged

Copyright by New York Times

A flat "withholding" tax of 10 per cent, deducted from all incomes at the source, was advocated yesterday before the Senate Finance Committee by Prof. Harley L. Lutz, of Princeton University, who said the levy would raise 7 billion dollars, or twice the $3,236,700,000 defense tax bill as approved by the House.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the committee, is known to favor such a tax, but he has expressed doubt that it can be made to apply at this time. Prof. Lutz conceded that the tax would be difficult of enforcement on the self-employed, but contended that such taxpayers as farmers and small businessmen would provide their own bookkeeping on ordinary income.

"The plan I propose," said Prof. Lutz, "will be far more effective than the present bill as an inflationary curb. It will siphon off much more purchasing power. It will curtail proportionately the purchasing power of all consumers, instead of applying rigid curtailment to only a portion of the 82 to 90 billions of national income."

Boston Expert Is Heard

The committee was told by Henry F. Long, of Boston, chairman of the committee on coordination of Federal, State and local taxation of the National Association of Tax Administrators, that there was a growing necessity of coordinating Federal and State tax systems, since both are now tapping so many of the same avenues of income.

Long opposed an increase in Federal estate taxes at this time, and said that provision should be made for the creation of tax-free reserves to meet such taxes. He said also that income taxes should not be made retroactive.

Senator George indicated that today's hearing would be the final one, and that the committee next week would go into executive session to determine the final draft that would be presented to the Senate, probably within 10 days.

Pleads for the Golfers

Herbert Graffis, of Chicago, editor of the magazine, Golfdom, declared that the major piece of sporting equipment used by the average American is the "seat of the pants," and said that the large number of rejections of selectees proves Americans should get more exercise.

The taxes on golf equipment, Graffis asserted, would lower the amount of golf equipment sold—five-sixths of which goes to people that play on public links and not to "the wealthy golf club set." He said that fewer people would get out and walk if they could not play golf.

Presidential Order Extends Army Terms

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 22.—A formal order allowing the War Department to keep men in the Army an extra 18 months, if the safety of America required them, was issued today by President Roosevelt.

It was tempered, however, with authorization for the demobilization of personnel after a year's service whenever the interests of national defense permitted.

The Presidential order made fully effective the Selective Service Extension Act, which became law last Monday. Under it, selectees can be kept in training for two and one-half years instead of a single year.

An 18 months' extension applies also to National Guardsmen. Reservists and enlisted men of the Regular Army.

Mr. Roosevelt's order said the Secretary of War might release selectees after only 12 months' service and transfer them to reserve components of the Army "with a view to the early creation of a large trained reserve while, at the same time, maintaining the Army in immediate readiness for use in the defense of the Nation."

In his discretion, the Secretary may discharge Reservists and Guardsmen after a year's active duty and enlisted personnel of the Army after the regular enlistment period is up, but only "as the interests of national defense permit."

Actually, the War Department has indicated that many selectees and Guardsmen will be kept in training no more than 14 to 18 months, unless the world situation becomes graver.

Officials said some 200,000 men probably would be released before Christmas. These include men who were 28 years old on July 1, married men who have served a year, and dependency and hardship cases.

Army Will Add Fifth Armored Division Soon

The striking power of the United States Army will be reinforced in October by creation of a fifth armored division, the War Department announced yesterday.

Full strength of an armored division is about 12,000 men, but the new division will be built around a skeleton force of trained men from the four existing units and selectees from the Armored Force Replacement Training Center at Fort Knox, Ky.

The American equivalent of Germany's panzer units, the first and second armored divisions were organized in July, 1940, and the third and fourth last April.

The new division is the first to be created under the direction of Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, who took command of the Armored Force when Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee was forced by illness to retire last month. Gen. Chaffee died in Boston yesterday.

The number of tanks to be assigned to the new division was not disclosed by the War Department, but the unit will be organized in the same pattern as the four existing armored divisions.

Spearhead of the division is the striking echelon, including an armored brigade of two light and one medium tank regiments and an artillery regiment.

The other echelons are reconnaissance, including a heavily armed scouting battalion equipped with fast scout cars, a light tank company and motorcycles; a support echelon comprising an infantry regiment, engineer battalion and field artillery battalion with an antitank section; the service unit, including ordnance, quartermaster and medical battalions, and the command echelon, which consists of the division headquarters and a signal company.

Experts Study Best Use of Consumer Goods

Miss Harriet Elliott, defense official, announced that a group of Government officials, scientists, merchants and purchasing agents had talked over yesterday ways of making the best use of the limited materials the defense program is leaving available for consumer good.

What decisions, if any, were reached was not disclosed.

Roosevelt To Broadcast Talk On Labor Day

Copyright by New York Times

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 22.—President Roosevelt will make a Nation-wide radio speech of Labor Day, September 1, it was asserted in authoritative quarters here tonight. It is unusual for the executive to make a speech on this day, and it was thought possible that he had some special message for organized labor, perhaps in connection with strikes on armaments projects on which over five million man-hours of work have been lost.

The President is expected to talk to labor and the Nation on labor problems on an hour program arranged by the Office of Production Management. It was understood that Mr. Roosevelt would speak about ten minutes. The program is scheduled for the hour between 1 p. m. and 2 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time.

3 From 116th Infantry Are Commissioned

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Aug. 22 (AP).—The first three men to be commissioned from the ranks of the 116th Infantry since the Virginia regiment's arrival here won their gold bars this week.

The three, advanced to second lieutenant, are Sergt. Samuel G. Burch, of Co. E, from Chase City, Va.; Sergt. Carl B. Smith, Co. K, Charlottesville, and Corpl. Robert B. Williamson, Co. H, Martinsville.

—destined machine tools. A carpet company, using machines once devoted to the manufacture of looms, is turning out what an OPM expert describes "one of the sweetest" machine tools he ever saw.

Even the Dictaphone Co. is making machine tools.

One firm which makes excavating equipment is processing military items for the British.

A textile machinery company in New England is using its machine tools on a Dutch order to such effect that an OPM technician says: "It can give cards and spades to its competitors and still beat the socks off them in making automatic rifles."

IT can't be done? It is being done, but at nowhere near the volume and extent necessary and possible if the woefully low armament production schedules are to be upped in a period when time is short.

One OPM production division technician estimates that a year has been lost, both in the production of machine tools and in actual armament production itself, through failure to force orders on the auto, refrigerator, washing machine, stocking, textile and shoe machinery, road building, earth-excavating machinery and printing-machinery builders.

If They'd Just Divert, Says One Official

Another production division official, immersed in the most difficult and technical of all the Army ordnance jobs, has been trying for eight months to have orders awarded to "outsiders," to dozens and dozens of firms not now included in the defense program, so that many hands can join in the work.

"'Convert' isn't even the word," he shouts. "It isn't even as difficult as that. All they have to do is 'divert.' Just divert their machine tools from civilian production, just change their jigs and fixtures. But the Army doesn't ask them to, doesn't place orders with them, and they keep right on making nondefense gadgets. Meantime we sit around waiting for brand new plants to be built and brand new machine tools to be constructed."

FROM one end of Washington to the other, and even in the OPM production division itself, can be heard the comment that "the greatest crime in the defense program" has been to allow the auto industry to produce more than 5,261,000 vehicles, of which 4,297,000 were passenger cars, in the year ended last August 1, a production greater by 20 per cent than any other year in history except 1929.

In the manufacture of those 5,261,000 vehicles, the industry used, and thus took away from defense uses, these amounts of the following scarce and strategic raw materials:

STEEL—7,730,000 tons, or about half the additional annual output which now must be added to the steel industry.

ALUMINUM—48,700,000 pounds, equivalent to about one month's production of the aluminum industry, or enough to build more than 2400 heavy, four-engine bombers.

NICKEL—16 million pounds of a metal of which there is now an acute shortage even for military purposes.

NICKEL STEEL—430 million pounds.

ZINC—203 million pounds.

CHROMIUM—23 million pounds of a metal of which present stockpiles are woefully inadequate.

COPPER—244 million pounds of a metal so much in demand that stockpiles of it cannot now be accumulated.

TIN—17,500,000 pounds.

TUNGSTEN—220,000 pounds.

RUBBER—578 million pounds, more than two-thirds the annual consumption of a material the future supply of which is gravely threatened; an amount considerably larger than our present stockpile.

AND while the auto industry was turning out passenger cars, the Engineer Corps is still deficient in trucks.

During the process, the defense program was denied the services of America's finest production and technical engineers and the work of 600,000 skilled production employes.

Use Is Lost Of 600,000 Skilled Men

When the proposal was first made, a year ago, that the auto industry convert its equipment to defense work, rather than, for the most part, do its two billion dollars of defense work in new plants with new equipment, the old cry went up, "It can't be done." The tools were specialized, unconvertible.

At best, the industry estimated, only 15 per cent of its tools could be adapted to defense work. Even this, be it noted, is no mean battery of equipment. However, now that the industry knows that its supply of raw materials for passenger cars will be drastically cut, and that it must convert to defense work or starve, the estimates have suddenly been revised upwards.

OPM technicians believe that from 40 to 60 per cent of the industry's machine tools are convertible.

IT is a very heartening prospect, this conversion of a three billion dollar industry into an arsenal for the United States. It would have been more heartening, and would have been accompanied by much less tragic unemployment of men and machines during the change-over period, had it been begun in volume a year ago. Or even if plans were now prepared, which they are not, for placing defense orders in the auto plants.

This impending shift, belated as it is, reveals the most cheering ray of hope on the defense horizon.

Against a background of failure to convert civilian industry to defense production, of fantastic attempts to pile the Ossa of defense production on top of the Pelion of civilian production, there is finally the grim fact that a shortage in raw materials is about to make an end to the folly.

Materials Shortage Ends The Folly

Civilian durable goods industries, like automobile manufacturing, see the writing on the wall. Their representatives, aware that the end has come to their raw material supplies, are in Washington by the hundreds, seeking defense orders. American industry can, and will do what OPM and Army never asked it to do, never forced it to do.

THUS, ironically, a shortage of materials for civilian purposes may beget, finally, "all out" military production, by forcing erstwhile nondefense industries to take armament orders if they are to work at all.

The OPM and the Administration can take no credit for it.

The best they can do, to redeem themselves somewhat, is to hasten plans for conversion—plans still unmade, but which an imperiled Nation might reasonably have expected to have been prepared a year ago.

Tomorrow: Firecrackers Instead of Cannon

Young Protests 10-Year Term Given Select

War Department officials today are weighing the demand of Representative Young (Democrat), of Ohio, for reversal of a ten-year prison sentence imposed on a 26-year-old selectee convicted of insubordination by a Fort Bragg, N. C., courtmartial.

Young wrote Secretary Stimson that he believed the sentence given Private John Habinyak, of New York City, was "a most amazing act of injustice and brutality toward a soldier."

Meanwhile, in Fort Bragg the public relations office issued a digest of the courtmartial proceedings, quoting Habinyak as saying he formerly earned $10 a day and would not work for $21 a month.

Habinyak, according to the digest, was sent to the guardhouse the day after he arrived in camp, when he had spit on the floor of the messhall and refused to clean it up.

"When I have to spit," he was quoted as saying, "I am going to spit and it does not make any difference where I am." The digest said Habinyak repeatedly disobeyed orders after being taken to the guardhouse and once, when told to clean his mess kit, offered to bet his battery commander $5 that he would never see him clean the kit.

Representative Young wrote Stimson that the battery commander, Lieut. Leo J. Kraus, was "doubtless a fresh officious officer who is not worth his salt in private life."

He demanded removal of Col. Charles B. Elliott, commanding officer at Fort Bragg, adding that if Habinyak's ten-year sentence to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta "is a sample of the judgment of Col. Elliott, God help the regiment if this Nation becomes involved in war."

move them to whatever destination they direct."

At a Hyde Park, N. Y., press conference, President Roosevelt said there was nothing to hide about stocks and production of oil and neither did he have any objection to giving the Senate information about the tanker situation and the use of tankers for war purposes, provided the information was not used to hurt the cause of the democracies.

Labor Day Rush Expected

To guarantee themselves adequate stocks for the anticipated Labor Day weekend rush, many local dealers planned to stay closed tomorrow. Several stations, members of a large chain, were closed yesterday.

Whatever rationing is being exercised by filling stations appears to be left to the discretion of the individual operator. This applies to the chains, as well as independents.

For example, one station on Georgia Avenue would sell "only a dollar's worth" while a sister outlet in the same chain invited customers to have their tanks filled up.

Most of the dealers limiting their sales had a 5-gallon ceiling. One operator said: "It's 10 gallons this minute, but I don't know how much you can buy here an hour from now."

Would "Fill 'er Up"

Two out of three places canvassed, however, were willing to "fill 'er up." At one station, when a customer protested at being limited to 5 gallons, the attendant said: "Ah, all right, drive around the block and I'll put in 5 gallons."

A special meeting is scheduled for 10 a. m. today in the office of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to discuss various conservation proposals. It was called yesterday by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, chairman of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee.

Maj. Snow yesterday announced appointment of Acting Police Supt. Edward J. Kelly to the committee, succeeding Maj. Ernest W. Brown, who is on leave pending retirement from the force.

Limitation of taxicab licensing, stoppage of permits for new filling stations and liberalization of taxi stand regulations are among the topics to be taken up at this morning's conference.

Edmund C. Barwell, president of Yellow Cab, yesterday announced that the company's large service center at New York and Montana Avenue Northeast has discontinued all petroleum sales to the public as a conservation step.

The C. I. O. United Federal Workers of America announced institution of a campaign to reduce the amount of gasoline used by its nearly 500,000 Government employes on the Eastern Seaboard.

Locals are expected to set up petroleum conservation committees which would arrange for several workers to travel to and from their jobs in one automobile and conduct drives for voluntary cooperation of union members in conserving gasoline by established methods.

The executive committee of Labor Department Local 12 here already has established a conservation committee. It will ask the Department of Labor for permission to set up a booth at the main entrance so that all employes with cars may register.

Dupont Circle Residents Plan Court Action

MRS. LEE WOLVERTON,
who has filed a $100,000 damage suit against Dupont Circle, Inc., apartment operators, charging the management harassed her in various ways and that an assistant manager broke into her apartment and beat her up

A group of Dupont Circle Apartment tenants announced yesterday that they would ask the District Court to compel operation of the property as an apartment hotel until their leases expire.

Meanwhile, another tenant, Mrs. Lee Wolverton, filed a $100,000 damage suit against the apartment operators, Dupont Circle, Inc. She claimed the management harassed her in various ways and that an assistant manager broke into her apartment and beat her up.

George L. Quinn, attorney for the company, commented that the rights of all leaseholders were being respected. He said the alleged assault on Mrs. Wolverton grew out of a "personal matter" and that the apartment had nothing to do with it.

Some Evicted

Some tenants of the place were evicted and others were asked to give up their leases earlier this summer in connection with a plan to lease the building to the Government for office use. The result was a bitter controversy which led to a Congressional investigation and a request that the Department of Justice consider cancelling the Government agreement to take over the property.

Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue asked consideration of the rights of tenants having leases in a letter he sent yesterday to Assistant Solicitor General Charles W. Fahey. O'Donoghue said his clients planned to ask an injunction "to compel Dupont Circle, Inc., to continue operation of the building as an apartment hotel and to specifically enforce the provisions of the lease and to continue to give to these lessees all the services in the building as an apartment hotel."

Complaint Filed

Mrs. Wolverton, a beauty shop executive, filed her complaint through Attorneys Lewis B. Perkins and Leon L. Schlway. The complaint said that on the night of July 22 Thomas Robertson, assistant manager, came into her apartment with a pass key when she had guests. Later, the complaint said, Robertson left but came back and broke in a door panel and threw Mrs. Wolverton against the wall, beat her on the head and body and kicked her shins. The complaint said Mrs. Wolverton was ill five days, as a result.

The complaint said that after May 22 the management began a course of harassment which disturbed Mrs. Wolverton's "quiet enjoyment" of her leasehold. The acts charged included filling up the elevators and lobby with furniture which was being taken from the place, allowing garbage to remain for days and permitting intruders to run through the hallways and knock on doors late at night. These things, the complaint said, made the place "practically noninhabitable" as a residence.

Mrs. Wolverton asked $10,000 actual damages and $90,000 punitive damages.

Quinn said that all rights of lease holders were being respected and would be respected for the term of their leases. Of the Wolverton suit, Quinn declared Robertson was not assistant manager but a desk clerk, that he was not on duty at the time of the alleged assault and that the incident was a personal difficulty between Mrs. Wolverton or members of her family and Robertson.

Dingell Drafts Bill to Aid Firms Hit by Priorities

A bill to give preferential treatment in award of defense contracts and subcontracts to firms forced to reduce or suspend operations because of priority rulings yesterday was prepared by Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan.

Dingell said he will introduce the bill in the House on Monday "to correct a dangerous condition" and to prevent "threatened mass bankruptcy to small industries."

The Michigan Democrat received a favorable reaction from the President on July 14 to his proposal that the names of manufacturers unable to obtain basic materials be certified to OPM, to become eligible for a primary contract or a subcontract. Mr. Roosevelt passed on the suggestion to OPM.

Dingell last night said the OPM "made several feeble gestures but as yet has made no concrete move to solve the pressing and important problem."

Manila Bay Warning Given by President

President Roosevelt has signed an executive order prohibiting unsupervised night time navigation of Manila Bay and warning that violators of the regulation would be subject to "attack by United States armed forces."

Portions of the area were mined several weeks ago. The order, published in the Federal Register, established the territorial waters of the bay and its tributaries as a "defensive sea area" and warned ships that they would operate in it at their own risk.

Transit Strike In Detroit At Impasse

By the United Press

Detroit, Aug. 22.—Mayor Edward Jeffries and A. F. L. leaders remained at odds late tonight over the city's three-day transit strike after the latter denounced the mayor's proposal to grant an exclusive bargaining contract to the union which won an election among streetcar and bus workers.

Jeffries said he was willing to sign such a contract, even though he doubted the city legally could do so, and let the courts make a final decision.

A. F. L. Attorney Thomas F. Chawke said that the proposal for a bargaining election between the A. F. L. Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach employes and the C. I. O. State, County and Municipal Workers of America "as it now stands reduces itself to an absurdity."

President Frank X. Martel of the Wayne County (Detroit) Federation of Labor also sharply denounced the proposal.

Chawke said he could not understand "the inconsistency of public officials who are bound by their oath of office when they on one hand administer a legal agreement and on the other hand contest in court that it is illegal."

Jeffries promptly replied to Chawke's argument.

"Tom Chawke," he said, "as a lawyer you should know that many times people who are not sure of their rights litigate their position in court."

The mayor's offer came as a surprise, as less than three hours earlier officials of Detroit's vast transit system had appealed to the A. F. of L. union to recede from its demand for sole bargaining rights because "the Nation's defense program might suffer."

avoided.

He added, however, that he did not know and could not guess whether the Government could avoid moving into the plant, idle since August 7.

Following the breakdown of Thursday's conference, which ended with a final statement of Green on the union's position, it was learned that Korndorff took a 2 a. m. plane yesterday for New York, presumably to lay the matter before the United States Steel board.

Yesterday afternoon, James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, left New York on what his office described as a week-end trip. However, Forrestal is known to have been close to the negotiations, and, according to one report, had been in touch with United States Steel Co. officials during the day.

Neither Sidney Hillman, OPM labor chief, nor William H. Davis, Mediation Board chairman, would comment on the progress of the dispute except to say that they were "waiting around."

Other major labor developments yesterday:

A strike was called by C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee members at the Republic Steel Co.'s Gadsen (Ala.) mills, which employ 4500. A union leader said the company paid wages far below those prevailing in the Birmingham district and that the strike objective was comparable pay, a union shop and check off.

The Department of Labor certified to the Mediation Board the 10-day-old strike at the Henry Vogt Machine Co., Louisville, Ky., which employs 1000 workers. The C. I. O. union struck for higher wages, union security, seniority and working condition concessions. The company has defense contracts for pressure valves, marine fittings and boilers.

Bay Ferry Strike Threat Is Renewed

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 22.—Officials of the International Longshoremen's Union (A. F. L.) today renewed their threat to take approximately 110 Chesapeake Bay ferry employes out on strike tomorrow because the State Roads Commission allegedly has refused to negotiate with the men regarding wages and hours.

Richard C. Bowie, secretary of L. L. A. Local No. 1602, said that one round trip of the ferry boats would be allowed tomorrow "for the convenience of the public." He said members of two unions—representing licensed and unlicensed employes—would go on strike after the first trip, probably about 9 a. m.

Finnish Freighter Seized by Cuba

Havana, Aug. 22 (INS).—The 3335-ton Finnish merchant ship, Kouru, was seized by the Cuban government tonight shortly after her arrival from a South American port with a cargo of pulpwood consigned to a Cuban firm. The captain and 18 crew members were interned.

The vessel shows marks of bomb hits alleged to have been inflicted by German bombers on June 20.

"JESUS LOVES ME"
ANNA B. WARNER

Jesus loves me! this I know,
For the Bible tells me so:
Little ones to Him belong,
They are weak, but He is strong.
Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
The Bible tells me so.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

For more than half a century children all over the world, even to the interior mountains of China, have loved this hymn, and today missionaries teach it to converts wherever they go. It was written by Anna B. Warner who wrote many bible stories, but would be remembered for this if she had written nothing else.

Prison Altar To Be Dedicated On Thursday

An altar contributed by a Chevy Chase woman will be the center of dedication exercises next Thursday of a church erected by inmates of Clinton State Prison at Dannemora, N. Y., to St. Dismas. He was the "good thief" who died with Jesus on the cross.

Mrs. Marie de Latrobe, 6308 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, wife of Lieut. Comdr. W. C. Latrobe, U. S. A., presented the "Magellan" altar, which has been in her family for generations, having been handed down by her father, a Spanish naval officer.

Convicts labored voluntarily for three years to construct the church—first prison-built house of worship within any large American penal institution.

Father A. H. Hyland, Catholic chaplain at Dannemora, conceived the idea of the church, feeling that "if our men could occasionally live in a different atmosphere, an atmosphere of peace and nearness to God, hundreds would be on the right track by themselves."

The Magellan altar is said to contain parts of the crude altar which the Portuguese navigator carried to the Philippines in 1521.

Presbyterians Plan a Tour And Picnic for Soldiers

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Presbyterian young people will get their chance to help the service boys today, as they stage a sightseeing tour of the city, beginning at 2 p. m. from Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. A picnic in Rock Creek Park will follow.

The hosts will come from Gunton-Temple, Sherwood, Eckington, Takoma Park and Chevy Chase congregations, and will escort the boys in private cars to the Capitol, the Congressional Library, the National Airport, the Washington Cathedral and other points of interest.

The Service Club of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, is staging a "game night" every other Wednesday at 8 p. m. for soldiers. Last Wednesday the servicemen were taken on a trip to Glen Echo amusement park.

While arrangements are still incomplete, there is a possibility that the Sherwood Presbyterian Christian Endeavorers may hold a special Endeavor meeting tomorrow night at Fort Meade, at the soldiers' invitation.

The Foundry Forge of Foundry Methodist Church tomorrow at 7 p. m. will stage a panel discussion between churchmen and a group of selectees to discuss furtherance of the work between the churches and the men in camps.

With many pastors vacationing, service chaplains again will fill local pulpits tomorrow as guest speakers, bringing messages on how the Government is spiritually caring for the selectees.

Arlington Chapel To Receive Bible Gift Tomorrow

On behalf of the American Bible Society, New York City, of which he is a general secretary, Frederick W. Cropp tomorrow at 10 a. m. will present a large pulpit Bible to the Arlington Cantonment Chapel.

According to Dr. W. L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society and local representative of the American Bible Society, the presentation will be the first of its kind. It is planned to place pulpit Bibles in each of the 555 Army chapels being built, he said.

The ceremonies will take place during the Protestant service, when Chaplain John B. Duncan will preach on "The Unsheathed Sword." Chaplains George E. Rixey and Leighton E. Harrell, both of the Chief of Chaplain's office, will participate.

From Autos To Guns

The issuance of the automobile curtailment order puts an end to the demoralizing uncertainty which has handicapped the industry ever since the OPM and the OPACS clashed over the manner and method of reducing output. Beginning with December the initial cut of 26½ per cent is to be followed by progressively drastic reductions in monthly output, with the object of bringing production for the entire year down to 50 per cent of the 1940 total. Mere announcement of this program does not, of course, insure its execution; in fact, defense officials acknowledge that production schedules may be upset by shortages of materials in the more distant months, if not in the immediate future.

But the curtailment order sets definite goals at which to aim. And it provides a basis for purposive discussion of ways and means of minimizing unemployment and alleviating other hardships resulting from enforced reduction of car output. While the industry is still working at a fairly high operating rate, the joint industry-labor committee which is being formed by Sidney Hillman will have an opportunity to study plans for speeding the training and transfer of workers to defense plants. The use of automobile equipment on defense work can also be facilitated by timely and judicious placement of defense orders with the industry.

In short, the drop to a 50 per cent production level as compared to the previous year can be achieved with minimum losses to workers and to the industry if some hard spade work is done during the next few months. If it isn't, we shall be laying up worse trouble for the future. For the shortage of materials used by the automobile industry and now needed for defense makes the prospective sharp cut in production unavoidable.

One-Man Mutiny

On July 4, just ten days after his induction into service, Private John Habinyak, a draftee from New York City, decided to declare his independence of the United States Army and the articles of war. When he was ordered by his lieutenant at Fort Bragg, N. C., to clean his mess kit he "willfully disobeyed." When another officer directed him to remove some bits of broken concrete from a road near the regimental guardhouse Private Habinyak refused. He rebelled again when ordered to clean the floor in the vicinity of his bed. And, whether as a gesture of contempt and defiance or from plain bad manners, Private Habinyak spat on the mess hall floor. This led to another incident of "willful disobedience" which seems to have become habitual with Private Habinyak.

Altogether, this young man's behavior was so extraordinary that one is constrained to wonder what motive, impulse or reasoning could have impelled him to it. Offhand it seems to suggest the quality which psychologists call "negativism." It is well enough known that the sudden and difficult adjustment to military life often precipitates nervous and emotional disorders in Army recruits. Whether or not such disorders enter into his case remains completely unanswered in the laconic report of the findings of the court-martial which sentenced young Habinyak to ten years and nine months of hard labor in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Indeed, on the basis of facts revealed by Col. Charles B. Elliott, commander at Fort Bragg, the severity of the sentence seems to make little more sense than does Habinyak's conduct. It is many times harsher, for example, than the sentences imposed by Federal courts for refusal to register for the draft. And civilians guilty of armed robbery in Washington usually spend only a small fraction of ten years behind prison bars. Of course, there may be circumstances in the case to warrant such a sentence, but if so, Col. Elliott or the War Department should hasten to make them public. Army morale certainly cannot be improved by imposing harsh punishments that seem to have no relation to the offense committed.

Ironic Anniversary

With Hitler's mechanized forces pounding at the gates of Leningrad, there will be no celebration anywhere of the second anniversary today of the Hitler-Stalin nonaggression pact. The period of mutually suspicious cooperation between the German and Russian dictatorships already seems like ancient history. For the end of that precious alliance has changed the whole war picture, and greatly intensified the complexity of the struggle in Europe. It would have taken a shrewd observer indeed to have foreseen two years ago that Great Britain and Russia would be fighting a common menace today while France is "collaborating" with Germany on the other side.

Every realist must base his views on the situation existing today. But that fact does not rob the anniversary of the Soviet-German pact of its underlying significance. Russians who are experiencing the terrors of blitz warfare today must recall with bitterness the surrender of Stalin to Hitler two years ago. A firm stand by the Russians then might have prevented the war. Or if Russia had been willing to fight at that time, as she is fighting now, she would at least have put Hitler to the disadvantage of dividing his forces between two fronts. Now the Russians are fighting the Nazi war machine almost unaided, not because Moscow recognized its mistakes and sought to make amends for the alliance with Hitler, but because that ruthless conqueror turned upon his ally at what he thought to be an opportune moment.

There has been a great deal of emphasis upon one inescapable lesson of this attack. The Berlin and Moscow regimes had become partners in plundering their neighbors. Russia had made some show of cooperating with the Germans in their more extended acts of aggression. Yet Hitler did not hesitate to turn upon his collaborator with a murderous onslaught when he had successfully overrun the rest of Europe. That fact stands out like a brilliant warning sign to all countries which may be deluded into believing that a reliable understanding with the Hitler regime is possible.

The other fact that we may well remember is that Hitler's perfidy did not suddenly transform the Moscow government into a champion of decency and democracy. Two years ago Stalin chose to align himself with a fellow dictator, presumably because he too was seeking spoils which he believed the "decadent democracies" were too weak to protect. It was not the Moscow regime but the Nazis who forced a change in that policy. In other words, Stalin had to be kicked out of the Axis before he was ready to join in the fight against Hitlerism.

There is now a great deal of sympathy in this country for the Russian people who are fighting for their homes and their lives. We recognize, too, that every stand which is made against the expanding Nazi conquest is of vital interest to the United States. But the American people must not allow themselves to forget the nature of the Communist system. The background of the Hitler-Stalin pact is not a stable basis on which to build a crusade for establishment of the eight-point program enunciated by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. At a time when the aid we are able to give countries fighting aggression is still comparatively meager, therefore, there can be little question as to the direction in which it should be flowing.

Drilling The CCC

Youths of the Civilian Conservation Corps, of whom there are still some 200,000 in 1100 camps scattered throughout the country, are to be taught "marching and simple formations," according to Army infantry drill regulations. The order has been issued through the War Department on the recommendation of CCC Director James J. McEntee, who points out, however, that weapons will not be issued and that the corps is not to become a military establishment in any sense of the word.

What useful purpose will be served by superimposing drill instruction upon peaceful conservation pursuits, for which the corps was originally established, may not be immediately apparent. But the truth is that CCC training has been extremely valuable to men entering the Army. Many of them with a backlog of CCC experience as truck and transport drivers, as welders, surveyors, cooks, photographers and field radio operators have proved decidedly more useful to the Army than white-collar draftees. Some of the CCC boys have even learned parachute jumping as part of their fire-fighting routine—an experience which the Army is doubtless utilizing to advantage.

Members of the CCC, whose average age is about 19, are also employed on a number of direct defense projects, involving construction and clearance work in Army areas. Selectees frequently complain when forced to perform such work on the score that they are in the Army to learn how to fight. But the work has to be done. Only when it is taken over by CCC boys, whose pay approximates that of Army recruits, can the latter give all their energy to military training. In several respects, then, CCC work tends to supplement Army work. Drill instruction for youths who are in top physical condition anyway will make it easier for those who will be shifted from the CCC to the Army.

True Words

Senator George spoke the truth when he told witnesses before the Finance Committee that "without a strong executive leadership we will not have the economy that ought to take place." It may be argued that Congress should provide the required leadership, but its members, being dependent upon the voters to return them to office, find it very difficult to resist pressure from spending groups in their own districts. There are courageous men in both House and Senate, who would be willing to support an economy campaign if they had assurance of Administration support. But they can hardly be expected to risk their political futures by doing battle unaided for an unpopular cause.

Occasional general appeals from the President or his advisers for cuts in nondefense expenditures or sporadic economy gestures will not provide the kind of backing that Senator George is calling for. What is needed is a definite plan of curtailment designed to cut hundreds of millions, or maybe a billion or more dollars from the nondefense budget. Secretary Morgenthau believes it is possible to save a billion dollars, but his words carry little weight in the absence of an endorsement by the President backed by a specific program.

Mudhole View

The Nazi propaganda ministry apparently has no objection to sentimentality—if it serves a useful purpose. But we'll wager a blocked mark that the official who recently passed for release a touching little account of the German soldier's tribulations in the east will wish he hadn't.

It seems that Corpl. Hans, bogged down in a Russian mudhole, was writing home and trying to say something that would get by the company censor. This is what he wrote: "Dense fog envelops our position. Mist turns into rain which falls incessantly. The Bolsheviks have resumed their furious fire and shrapnel and grenades burst all around. Suddenly Jahn shouts from his hole: 'It's fun, anyway! At last we experience the World War. Now when we get home we can tell our fathers that we, like them, really lay in the mud.'"

To normal minds such a message indicates either highly intelligent "boring from within" or greater perversion of natural instinct than most of us thought possible. It may be, of course, that hitherto the only element lacking in the Nazi ideal was the strength that comes from common experience, from the knowledge that in their time old and young have gone for weeks without taking off their boots. Perhaps this thought will hearten the older generation at home, making more easily acceptable the growing realization that the war goes on and on from one appalling campaign to another. But we doubt it. After all, lying in the mud proved to be a rather futile sacrifice in 1914-18. Will it lead to any less bitterness, frustration and ultimate failure now? "From mud to mud in one generation" is scarcely a thrilling slogan in any event. If young Germans fighting in Russia look to such a grim prospect for relief from the horrors of war, their spirit must be somewhat less buoyant than Herr Goebbels would have us believe.

THE RAVEN AND THE DOVE

They sent the raven, according to the word given.
But the raven came not, though they followed
The course of its flight, and waited into the night.
They sent the dove, and the dove returned,
With no promise, no green leaf
To bring hope out of grief.
They sent the dove again into the world,
Where night had been, and rain . . .
And the dove returned, bearing the olive leaf.

The raven found a tree rising from the flood,
And there he stayed, filling the morning air
With the harsh triumph of his cry . . .
But the dove returned, following the sure compass
Moving in the blood . . .
Following the call of hope along the sky.
So the tender bird and the dark bird
Fulfilled the word.

Defense Detours

Thanks to The Post for its plan to explore the "detours on defense."

Heretofore, you have not pulled your punches. Now, you are up against stiff competition, and a bewildering maze of facts and fancies, personalities and temperaments.

We people who haven't been able to get hysterical about the "real danger" in which America lives today would like to see the following questions answered:

In 1917-18, we gave soldiers five or six weeks training and put them in the trenches. This time, we have been unable to train a soldier in a whole year. Why? Are the soldiers different or are the generals incompetent?

A year ago, we hysterically rushed men to camp. Your pictures show that the camps are still making dummy guns to train them with. Will you publish pictures of the "dummy" generals or "dummy" Secretaries of War that are responsible for this?

A national magazine publishes "gripes" of men in the camps which sound much more serious than the "gripes" we remember from the last war. Are these complaints justified, or are we just getting more skilled in "griping"?

We're not excited. Many of us believe that if Hitler conquers all Europe and Russia, he would have too big a job for anybody yet ahead of him if he wanted to smash us. Why are we not worried? Are there things the President knows that we don't know? If so, must these things always be kept from us? Are we mice or men?

Leave The Clocks Alone

Three cheers for F. B. H. for his letter of August 14! In my humble opinion, it would be better for all concerned if the powers that be would stick to the affairs of state and let nature take its course as far as the sun is concerned. If it would be really beneficial to the greatest number of "office workers" to have more hours of daylight after finishing a day's work in the summer, why not go to work an hour earlier and leave the clocks alone. Why should we "kid" ourselves into getting up an hour earlier in the morning simply by turning our time pieces ahead an hour—it would still be 6 o'clock even though our clocks said it was 7. And at night we would either go without an hour's sleep or go to bed an hour earlier without fooling ourselves by thinking we were going to bed at the usual time because our clocks said so.

Commercializing "V"

It is hard to understand how supposedly intelligent grown-ups can indulge in the childish mummery of the current "V-for-victory" campaign. Whatever dignity or significance the movement may have in Europe is completely lost in the ridiculous fashion craze it has become in America.

There are neckties with "V" designs, "V" pins, "V" lipstick, "V" slippers, "V" hair-dos. A special toe tap is advertised for tapping out the "V" in Morse code.

Now it is all very well for children to play at this sort of thing, but why their parents should go in for it is beyond me.

Do we take the mass blood-letting in the old world so lightly that it means nothing more than a new type of permanent wave or a new style necktie? The "V" might well stand for the innocent victims on both sides of this insensate war.

Expenditures Tax to Curb Inflation

The President, Mr. Keynes, and many others have recently warned us of inflation. Unless our armament program is financed out of the savings of us consumers, we shall be competing with the Government for goods and sending prices skyward. If our total annual income is 100 billion dollars and the annual cost of our armament program 30 billions, then our savings must be kept up to 30 billions a year, our expenditures kept down to 70 billions, or else we shall be bringing upon ourselves inflation with all its evils.

To prevent inflation the British have resorted to compulsory saving; and undemocratic though this undeniably is, it strikes so directly at the crux of the problem that we are often advised to do the same. The President, however, hopes to achieve the desired result by the Emergency Price Control Act, now before Congress. This act would empower him to "establish such ceilings (for commodities and rents) as in his judgment will be generally fair and equitable to buyers and sellers of such commodity or commodities . . ." However endangered democratic institutions may be in the world today, Congress may well pause before giving up in the United States the free economy which is one of the most important of our democratic institutions; however well-intentioned and well-informed the President may be in carrying out this act, his most devoted followers may well pause before giving to any man power so unlimited. Economists point out a defect more serious yet: if the Federal law sets ceilings below the prices set by the economic law of supply and demand—and this is the only purpose of such ceilings—then there will not be enough commodities to go round, unless these commodities be at the same time rationed. Artificial prices thus lead to rationing no less artificial. The impossible difficulties of administering the NRA and its attempt to determine all wages and hours would be as nothing compared with the difficulties of administering a law attempting to determine all prices and rents; the intolerable bootlegging of the 1920's in alcoholic commodities would be as nothing compared with the bootlegging of the 1940's in all commodities. The proposed act, like the prohibition law and the NRA, may be most commendable in its intention, but one wonders whether our former failures have yet taught us that good intentions alone do not pave the way to a better world.

Inflation can be avoided, let us remind ourselves, only if consumers save as much as the Government spends. How then may the needed saving best be encouraged, needless spending best be discouraged? Perhaps most effectively by the right sort of taxation. For the power to tax is the power to destroy; to tax is not only to divert from private to public use the full amount of the tax; it is also to destroy part of the demand for the article taxed, since demand falls as prices rise. A tax on, say, refrigerators would thus mean both more money for the Government and less money for the manufacturer, less demand for his product. That tax can therefore best be defended which destroys only such buying as can least be defended. Hence in levying taxes the Government should be concerned partly indeed with obtaining some of its needed funds, but quite as much with destroying such purchases as are needed least. At a time like the present, when the Government must raise the greater part of its funds by borrowing from the people's savings, it is more important that a tax should increase these savings than that it should itself yield a large return.

To create the needful private savings, therefore, taxation should destroy needless private spending. This it could do by taxing not what people earn but what they spend, not their total income but their total expenditure. As with the income tax, a tax on expenditures should exempt a certain minimum, so as not to lower the standard of living where it most needs to be raised; and again as with the income tax, the rates on all amounts in excess of this minimum should be heavily graduated, since the more dollars we spend the less satisfaction we get for each dollar spent. Except in having a much broader base than the present income tax, an expenditure tax should be no harder to collect: from a man's total income would be deducted his authorized exemptions and the savings which he could prove he had made, and the remainder would be his taxable amount. (In his total savings could be included money invested in education and donations to church and to charity.)

Such a tax would combine the advantages of many other taxes and avoid their disadvantages. Like the income tax, it would be paid only by those who by their own spending show that they are able to pay; but unlike the income tax, it would distinguish between money spent on oneself alone and money invested in the socially useful, taxing each person progressively not in proportion to what he sucks out of that life-stream. It would also reach, as the income tax cannot, income from the many billions in tax-exempt securities; and if its base were made sufficiently broad, the base of the income tax may not need to be broadened further. Like a tax on luxuries, it would leave unaffected the consumption of necessities; but with graduated rates it would do much more to check the consumption of nonessentials. Nor would it have to draw any arbitrary line between what are luxuries and what are not. For luxuries depend not only on what we buy but also on how much: to the music lover a piano would be essential as it is nonessential to the unmusical; one motor car to the family would usually be considered a necessity, a second would not. Thus to tax pianos and motor cars is sometimes to tax luxuries and sometimes essentials: to tax expenditures above an exemption for necessities would be to tax nonessentials almost exclusively. Like the sales tax, the expenditure tax would fall on consumption; but whereas the sales tax, in neither granting any exemptions nor graduating its rates, burdens the poor and not the rich, a graduated tax on all expenditures above a certain minimum would burden the prodigal rich but not the thrifty poor.

The proposed tax would prevent inflation more effectively than any attempt to ration commodities or establish artificial ceilings; but instead of suspending the democracy we are trying to defend, it would allow our economy to operate as freely as ever. The savings which alone can prevent inflation it would bring about no less effectively than any attempt to make these savings compulsory; but instead of taking from us our personal freedom along with our personal savings, it would give us the new privilege of naming the amount of our personal taxes. And while greatly promoting our savings when the Government will be borrowing all the money which we can possibly save, it would supply the Government with a quite new source of revenue when it will be needing all the revenue it can possibly get.

We Wash Dishes In The Bathroom

This city, Washington is a wondrous legend to all the small-town people from Napa to New Rochelle. I have a friend from Findlay, Ohio, whose neighbors speak of him with new respect since he got a job down here, although he hasn't changed a bit, he says, except perhaps to become lazy and a little smug. My wife Toinette and I are small-town people too, and we dreamed about this Capital like all the rest of America dreams. From a distance it cast its spell on us through (as now it seems) the press agents' haze.

For the Washington we dreamed about, the Washington of long shaded avenues and Roman temples, the Washington of great Mr. Lincoln just a-sitting, lasted for me just half an hour the cold March night I came here, one of 110,000 others to be employed here by the Government in the last eight years, I understand, recently at the rate of 200 a day.

I remember vividly the thrill of that first March midnight, riding swiftly up Pennsylvania Avenue from Union Station in a smooth streamlined street car, seeing for the first time in my life the Capitol dome glowing among dark-limbed trees, gliding past—farther up the Avenue—the wide marble flanks of the new National Gallery of Art, catching glimpses then of the starlings roosting on the pediment of the Archives building. It was a clear beautiful night.

The Y was completely filled up. The last single room had been taken weeks before. I might rent bed space in a double-room, the chipper night clerk said. I put down my deposit and the night clerk handed over the key.

Down the corridor on the fifth floor I unlocked the door of a room beside the lavatories, switched the light button. Like marionettes on one string two sleepy forms rose blinking from their separate beds. Wrong room, I thought. "Beg your pardon," I said, turned out the light and toted my suitcase back to the elevator.

The nightclerk was very apologetic. He'd rented that last bed fifteen minutes before, mislaid the slip, and forgotten all about it. To make amends for my inconvenience he phoned a half dozen private rooming houses to find some kind of accommodation for me. They all reported full up. I thanked him and set out on my own.

Around the corner on the Avenue a neon ad attracted me: HOTEL ROOMS $1 UP. A hallway with a desk served the "Hotel" for a lobby. "Up" in the sign outside must have meant the location of the vacant room, for the sullen clerk walked me four flights up to a big attic room. The window sashes did not fit, so the place was well ventilated. I was so tired that I discovered only next morning when I awoke, cold, that the room was altogether unheated as well. I comforted myself with thought of the low rental I had paid and a decision to move out right away.

I was there for two weeks.

Those were two wretched weeks during which I couldn't much enjoy even the thought that by simply looking out my office window and across the park I could see the spacious White House. Grippe besieged me, wore me down. I began going into restaurants to find a spot warm enough for writing letters home.

Toinette could not understand why I had not sent for her. A housing shortage? In Washington! No apartment, not even a simple bedroom-bathroom-kitchenette in all that great lovely Capital City?

There were apartments, yes, but with carfare considered they would have taken nearly half of our $120 a month income. Those downtown housekeeping rooms which would have taken only a third of our income or less were dark and vermin-ridden, unfit for living. In near desperation I checked my findings with the Washington Housing Association and learned that for the 32% of us new employes earning $1500 a year or less there were only 138 total dwelling units available at rents we could afford.

Frankly, we're ashamed. We would like to love this city. We think it could be worthy of admiration and of love. We certainly think that America's first city, the champion of democracy, the "hope of Athens and of Amsterdam," should be above all others a model city and not a hive of dirt, overcrowding and disease.

Toinette and I are living now in a furnished room on Vermont at a rental that should secure us an unfurnished apartment, but doesn't. We're doing all our cooking on an electric burner, we're competing with eight other Civil Service employes for the single bathroom, we're washing our dishes in that bathroom too—it's the only facility for dishwashing there is, and every meal we're clambering two flights of stairs to the refrigerator shelf we rent for another dollar a month.

To the gentlemen of the OPM Washington may well be the Key City of National Defense; to certain feature writers with blinkers it may well be the place "where the magnificence of a Nation's bounty has been significantly assembled." But to Toinette and me who live here it's only the place where you must wash your dinner dishes in the bathroom. If it weren't for those evening concerts at the Watergate we'd be thoroughly disillusioned.

JOHN HOLLEY.

Cooperation

As a resident of Arlington, I strongly favor the cession by Virginia to the Federal Government of all jurisdiction and control over the new airport. There should be no splitting of hairs because of the small amount of tax revenue involved. Nothing is to be gained by a pleayunish policy in the matter. Virginia should continue to do as she has done, to wit: Provide wide and modern highways to the northern Virginia boundary line, and the Federal Government should provide such bridge facilities as are necessary to get the constantly increasing traffic across the river (which is solely within the District of Columbia). Another bridge leading across Analostan or Theodore Roosevelt Island is badly needed.

The utmost of cooperation between the authorities of Virginia and the Federal Government is urgently demanded to solve the already serious traffic problems.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Underlying Mistake

COMMENTING on Senator Byrd's recital of the figures showing the meager output of tanks, guns, and planes, the New York Times says that "such figures form a startling contrast with the huge sums that Congress has appropriated for defense. The causes for that contrast deserve the country's serious study." They do indeed. Almost everyone must have asked himself how one can reconcile the dark picture painted by Senator Byrd with the much brighter picture which has so often been painted by defense officials and supported by the President's remarks.

LIPPMANN

No doubt the outlook is not quite so bad as one might gather from the Senator's speech. But it is not nearly so good as one might infer from the President's remarks. For while Senator Byrd has not quite got there yet, he is on his way to uncovering a basic misconception in the planning of the defense program.

TO make the thing clear to ourselves, let us consider the planning of a program for the production of apple pies. You make an estimate that you need 30 apple pies. If you ask the cook to bake one pie a day for 30 days, you will have produced 30 pies. That is one way to get a lot of pies. But there is another way, and that is to hire 30 cooks to bake 30 pies in one day. If you follow the first method—one cook making one pie a day—you do not have to bother the other 29 cooks. If you follow the second method—30 cooks making 30 pies in one day—you get the pies quickly. If your first guess was wrong and you really need 60 pies, you can get them quickly, and you finish with the pie-making business quickly.

Speaking very, very roughly and broadly, the OPM, with the President and the War Department agreeing, decided last year to have one cook make one pie a day for 30 days, leaving the 29 other cooks free to fry their own fish. That is why Senator Byrd can now say truthfully that there are as yet very few pies and why the defense officials have been able to say truthfully that there are going to be many pies.

THE broad figures tell the story. There are about 50 billions to be spent. Less than two billions were spent in 1940, and 17 billions are to be spent in 1941, 23 billions in 1942, and nine billions in 1943 and after. In the long run this will mean a lot of equipment. But the long run may be too long, and anyhow what counts is not whether we accumulate, say, 50,000 planes eventually, but how soon we can reach the point where we produce planes at the rate of three or four thousand a month. We needed not an order for 30 pies in 30 days but a program for being able to bake 30 pies in one day. Then we could produce such an avalanche of pies that no one near it could bear to think of apple pies for years to come.

The reason we adopted the wrong method is that a year ago neither the President and the New Dealers nor the business men in OPM were willing to place defense ahead of business as usual. The Administration was afraid of temporary unemployment due to the changeover from civilian to military production, and it was afraid of labor, and it was afraid to ask the people to accept a reduction in their standard of life. And the business men were for the most part in agreement with Mr. Knudsen who believed all last summer that the defense program should be "superimposed" on normal business.

THAT in substance is why the defense program is moving slowly and is inadequate. It has been planned as a kind of annex and superstructure to an immense boom in private business. That is why we have just produced more private automobiles than have ever been produced and sold anywhere at any time. That is why the raw materials, the skilled labor, the managerial ability, and the machine tools needed to produce this record-breaking output have not been enlisted for national defense.

It has often been said that we need centralization of authority in Washington. That is true. But most of all we need a central authority with a true conception of the task, which is that a massive output eventually will do us no good but that by a massive capacity to produce in the near future, this war can be won. And then we need to realize that the only way to get quickly a massive capacity to produce is to cut drastically into civilian consumption and force the productive capacity, which now serves civilians, to work for defense.

The time has come to put on forced draught—to make up our minds to produce this year what under our leisurely plans we do not expect to produce until the spring of next year—to make up our minds to produce in the first half of 1942 what we now plan to produce in the whole of 1942. This can be done. The British, when they were at last aroused after Dunkerque, did just that kind of thing. We can do it if we have the will and the courage to do it.

If we could really make up our minds to do that at no matter what sacrifice of our convenience and of business as usual, we could acquire a power in the world which would give substance to our words; with our whole industrial energy mobilized, we should be irresistible and invincible. The outcome would not be in doubt nor too long delayed. For if the American people will really work like the very devil for the next 12 months, they will have won—and at no tragic cost—the second American war of independence.

THAT war cannot be won except after long years of waste and suffering as long as we lack the character to choke this fantastic and disgraceful boom, and go all out for defense.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear Ma:

Well I am just back from another manoover with my outfit and I don't know whether we won or lost on account of there was a dispute between the umpires. One ruled that we was exterminated and the other came up with a decision that we was not even touched. It is all on account of the flag system witch I gess you never heard of so I will explane it to you ma.

* * * *

Of coarse we do not shoot each other in these here war games but at the same time nobody can tell how the fight came out if it is all forgot as just a cross country outing. So a lot of flags is used to denote where we are and what happened. All we jeeps do is obey orders and we don't even know what the main idea is. But the observers and umpires who have the whole thing worked out on maps get a idea what wood of happened if it had been a actual battle. Here is where the flags come in.

* * * *

An umpire waving a blue flag indercates that you are smack in the middle of an area which is under artillery bombbardment and that it is a very unhealthy spot to stay in. If he has a yellow flag it is serposed to show that you are under machine gun fire and that if you go any further into it you wood be shot full of holes in a real war. Another colored flag means that we are advancing thru a heavy smoke screen and so on. I heard that in this last battle somebody got all mixed up on the flags and it still is a question witch got mixed up most the officers or the referees. Anyhow one official said the flags meant my division had walked right through a area witch the enemy was giving the works and that we was mostly all dead or wounded. He said that in a real fight all of us wood have been legible to be buried as the Unknown Soldier. Another referee said nothing of the kind. He said he was a better judge of flags than the other fellow and that from what he saw we had been safe all the time except from more bunions.

* * * *

Of coarse for all I know one of 'em is color blind but I do not care as long as the generals do not order the game played over again.

* * * *

Believe me I am glad the summer is almost over as the weather seems twice as hot in a army as it does anywhere else and it seems to me I have spent the last four weeks in a dust cloud. I never knew there was so much dust in America. It wood almost be a great break for me if I got lent to Iceland, except that I do not think I would like the long days up there.

* * * *

Sergeant Mooney says the sun does not set at all in the summer in Iceland and that it is day time 24 hours. A twelve hour day is plenty for me, especially in the army. In a place where the sun does not go down I wood be afraid the bugler wood get all mixed up and start blowing me out of bed at midnight.

* * * *

Well anyhow I am getting so used to tough brakes that nothing bothers me much no more, except when I do not get regular letters from you and Lillian and Doris and all the girls witch reminds me do you know where Lucretia Willeets has moved? All my letters to her come back.

Love,
OSCAR.

A Pacific New Deal

By Mark Gayn

Steps to Curb Japanese Aggression

FAR EASTERN history was made in the Atlantic last week, when the leaders of Britain and the United States met ostensibly to discuss a New Deal for a post-war world.

The fact alone that such a meeting was held was enough to tip the precarious balance of power in the Pacific. But even more important was the belief that the Japanese menace figured in the Roosevelt-Churchill conversations at least as prominently as the high-sounding eight-point design for peace.

It was significant that among Mr. Churchill's aides was Sir Alexander Cadogan, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, who once served as Minister to China and whose specialty, apart from intelligence work, is the Far East. Mr. Roosevelt was similarly supported by Mr. Sumner Welles, who has recently emerged as this country's leading castigator of Japan's aggression.

There were countless guesses—especially in Japan—on the nature of the Roosevelt-Churchill New Deal for the Pacific. The dominant note of the Japanese reaction was the fear of misguessing—for an error could mean for Japan the difference between a great empire and a great failure.

IT seemed obvious, however, that when Roosevelt and Churchill sat down to discuss the Far Eastern situation, they could pick on one of only two courses: appeasement and active resistance. And the gangrene of Japanese aggression had eaten its way so close to the vital organs—Malaya, Burma, the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies—that only a major operation could check the disease.

The first echo of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting came almost simultaneously with the announcement of their rendezvous. The British board of trade barred all exports to Japan and the invaded areas, except with licenses—which were not being issued.

This was but another salvo in the bombardment opened by the heavy economic artillery of Britain and the United States a month earlier, when they followed up the seizure of Indo-China by the freezing of Japanese assets and the virtual suspension of trade.

IT took the two powers a decade to fire this broadside, but once it was fired, it hit the target. For the first time in more than 20 years there were near-riots in front of food stores in Japan and the situation looked ugly enough to necessitate a special government interdiction against queues and food hoarding. The stock market went into a bad slump. The silk exchange closed its doors. And in Shanghai, the weak Chinese dollar rose against the yen.

Masatsune Ogura, who as finance minister and a former head of the Sumitomo super-trust should know better, issued a calming announcement, assuring each and all that though the situation was, well, serious, it was not grave. Japan, he explained, could do more harm to Britain and the United States than these two greedy, war-mongering nations could do to peace-loving Japan.

But Ogura's confidence could be but poor comfort to the farmers, who lost in Uncle Sam their best customer for silk; to the few struggling export industries, which lost not only their best markets—in the United States, the British Empire and the Dutch East Indies—but also the main source of the raw materials they need; to the heavy industries, which almost overnight were deprived of their sources of oil, rubber, tin, scrap iron, steel and manganese.

More than one Japanese publicist timidly admitted that the democratic blow to Japan was extremely painful and that the acquisition of a few bases and of rice fields in Indo-China was proving to be a costly bargain.

NOT even the most optimistic officials in Washington and London, however, could pretend that the retaliatory economic steps taken up to the time of the Roosevelt - Churchill meeting would reform Japan.

Japan could have been made to see the light in the unhappy winter of 1931-'32, when her army embarked on its great adventure in Manchuria. A decade later—today—economic suasion could no longer be effective against a nation which had overrun entire East Asia and nurtured hopes of dominating the entire world.

Aggression is a cumulative process. It starts with small things—with Rhinelands and Manchurias—and grows to unmanageable proportions unless stopped in time.

Japan's aggression has now reached the point where economic sanctions, however damaging, cannot halt her military advance. Her political structure, her economy, her social life and her war machine have been geared for conquest. Empire builders, ultra-nationalists, munitions makers have taken the saddle. Considerations of domestic political power, of profits, of "face" have become of paramount importance.

Against these new considerations and the new vested interests, the freezing of the assets and the cessation of gasoline exports were valueless. On the contrary, unless supplemented by other decisive steps, they could provide the stimulus for new aggression.

THE most ominous aspect of Japan's latest venture in Indo-China was its distinctly military character.

Japan did not move into Saigon and Camranh Bay at this time because she needed the Indo-Chinese rice, coal or rubber. She could have obtained all these by political pressure — and Indo-China's coal and rice, anyway, could find no other buyer.

Japan struck in the south only because she needed air, naval and military bases—new jumping-off boards for new conquests. Today she is in a position to strike east, into the Philippines; south, at the Dutch East Indies and Malaya; or west, into Thailand and Burma.

For this reason the move-in on Indo-China can be regarded not as a separate, independent adventure, but only as a prelude to new aggression—either in the South Seas or in Siberia. In the latter case, the new Japanese bases in Indo-China will secure Japan's rear against the democracies, should the latter come to Russia's aid.

IF this design for conquest is recognized in Washington and London; if the two capitals admit at last that Japan is irretrievably on the other side of the political fence—then the two nations can begin to talk to Japan in a language of power politics which she can understand much better than words of appeasement.

There have been recent indications of a strengthening democratic backbone. The Philippines have been placed on a war footing. British naval reinforcements have been sent to the Far East. Australian and Indian units continue to pour into Singapore. The Netherlands East Indies—with a little trepidation—followed Britain and the United States in freezing the Japanese assets.

It still remains to be seen what decisions have been reached at the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, but the fact alone that they decided on all-out aid to Russia—in defiance of Japanese threats to blockade Vladivostok—is a good barometer of their intentions.

But all the moves made up to now have been woefully inadequate and uncoordinated. There have been omissions—such, for instance, as the failure to give major aid to China—so glaring that Japan could not be blamed for feeling she could indefinitely trample on democratic toes in the Pacific.

IT is difficult to map out a blueprint for defense within a newspaper article, but some of the more obvious steps can be set down here:

1. Japan must be told in plain words that if she attacks Thailand or Siberia, these two will be given immediate assistance.

In the case of Thailand, the burden will fall on England, and she might usefully push her own Malayan outposts deep into Thailand the moment Japanese troops cross the Cambodian-Thai border. This method was employed with striking effectiveness at Kulangsu, South China, a couple of years ago at the instance of Admiral Harry Yarnell.

If Japan attacks Siberia, a portion of the United States-made heavy bombers and fighters assigned to Britain should be flown to Siberia by way of Alaska, Petropavlovsk and Khabarovsk.

In either case, both Britain and the United States must tell Japan exactly what they propose to do. Secrecy is a useful diplomatic weapon. But the time has come to show Japan some of the trump cards held by the democracies. Such a look might have a sobering effect on the Japanese fighting services.

2. An agreement must be reached—and made public—on the pooling of the American and British bases in the Pacific. The opening of the Singapore base to American men-of-war must have an electric effect on Japan, and if a few cruisers and submarines are sent there on a training visit, the effect would be still more impressive.

3. Armed aid to China must be intensified immediately. Some months ago, it was announced that Army fliers would be allowed to volunteer for service in China—and a large number did. Yet, none has yet left for China. A few hundred modern fighters and bombers, would compel Japan to keep in China the air force units she might want to employ in Thailand or Siberia. And a few large bombers in Chinese hands might help to bring the war close to the Japanese man-in-the-street.

4. The garrison in the Philippines must be greatly and promptly strengthened—in numbers, equipment and air force. The United States Asiatic Fleet, at present woefully weak, should also be reinforced, principally with warships suitable for raiding; cruisers and submarines.

In each of these moves, publicity is an essential feature—for fear alone can deter Japan from stabbing Russia and Britain in the back. And if these four steps are complemented by the inclusion of Russia in the democratic bloc in the Pacific, Japan may very well hesitate before embarking on another adventure.

Navy Alert For Tirpitz

Churchill Incident

Joseph Driscoll, one of a group of correspondents on a voyage to Iceland with vessels of the United States Neutrality Patrol, relates some other intimate details of the voyage. All articles are subject to censorship by the United States Navy.

By Joseph Driscoll

NOW IT can be told that a special task force of the United States Navy was on the way home from carrying reinforcements to Iceland during the time when Prime Minister Churchill was returning to Great Britain on the battleship Prince of Wales from his historic conference with President Roosevelt on the American side of the Atlantic.

Churchill has long been Herr Hitler's pet hate (the animosity is reciprocated), and it was feared Hitler might risk the Von Tirpitz in a desperate effort to sink the Prince of Wales and its distinguished passenger. There was a further motive in that the Von Tirpitz is a sister ship of the Bismarck, which sank the British battle cruiser Hood, only to be tracked down and destroyed by various units of the British Home Fleet, including the same Prince of Wales.

The Von Tirpitz, operating out of Kiel, finished her trial runs in the Baltic last month, according to my information. Since then her movements have been a mystery, although there was reason to believe she, like the Bismarck, might make a dash into the open Atlantic to prey upon enemy and neutral shipping.

IT SO happened that our naval task force, homeward bound from a successful convoying of reinforcements to Iceland, crossed the path of Prime Minister Churchill's party, which touched at Iceland en route to Europe. The task force was on the alert for all passing ships, including the Von Tirpitz, from the moment we left Reykjavik, for the Navy, of course, had known of the Churchill-Roosevelt rendezvous days before it was officially disclosed.

Knowing that the Prime Minister was returning to Britain by way of Iceland, the big question was: would we encounter either the Von Tirpitz or the Prince of Wales, or both? If both, then we would be spectators and probably participants in one of the greatest sea battles ever, with the Nazi dictator gambling his only complete full-sized battleship in a mad throw against the Prime Minister's life.

The showdown came on our first night out. Our sound listening devices indicated German submarines were as close as 100 miles to the east, but no German surface ships were observed. Then strange warships were espied to the west of us. One of our destroyers, engaged on the outer patrol of our convoy, dashed out to investigate the newcomers, a battleship accompanied by a smaller warship, who were doing 28 knots, north by northeast.

IN THE Arctic twilight, the foreign ships were challenged by blinker light signals. Had the recipients of our attentions included the Von Tirpitz, she might have enjoyed the advantage of the opening salvo. As it was, the alien battleship replied with a correct identification signal that established herself and running mate as British. Accordingly, they were allowed to pass without molestation.

Soon thereafter Prime Minister Churchill's party put in at Iceland and received a greeting from the British and American forces in joint occupation of that Arctic outpost against Germany.

Incidentally, ours was an all-American convoy, no foreign ships being included. Far from permitting British convoys to join us and take advantage of our protection, the American convoys and the British convoys kept clear of each other as much as possible.

Day Bombings Worth Risks, R. A. F. Finds

By William W. White

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 21.—A squadron leader of one of the R. A. F. bomber formations on returning from a daylight raid over Germany told the New York Herald Tribune that "daylight offensives must not be judged only by the results of individual attacks but by the cumulative effects of incessant bombing in broad daylight."

"I suppose most people, before the war," he said, "expected daylight bombings would be the usual thing. The Germans evidently thought so and made all their preparations accordingly, but they soon saw in the Battle of Britain that daylight bombing, in the face of good fighter defense, was a hazardous undertaking. We, in the R. A. F., knew all along what difficulties we would have to face in daylight attacks but we are facing those difficulties now and overcoming them."

"Surprise is a great thing. We achieve it by all sorts of means. Our bombers sometimes fly so low their approach is very sudden and antiaircraft guns are scarcely trained on them before the bombs are dropped and the bombers are safely away. Or again, we make a lot of simultaneous attacks, some heavy and some light, so the German fighters don't know where to go," he said.

And the American-built Boeing flying fortresses "give us all another means of achieving surprise—they fly too high up to be seen or heard and even if they are detected by instruments they probably would have bombed and run away before the German fighters can climb up to engage them."

"Even so, daytime bombing is bound to be risky business," he said.

"But day bombing has so many advantages against particular targets that it is well worth the risk," he said. "These advantages are, of course, greater precision and certainty in attacking small or isolated targets."

"If you come down to 50 feet, as we did today, a direct hit is 99 times out of 100 a certainty. The deadly effect of precision bombing has been conclusively proven, I think. Not a bomb is wasted and we can destroy a target with a small force of bombers."

Fair Enough

War Creates Amnesty For Exploiters

BY RIGHT I ought to be having the jumps over the state of the Nation, the war, and all, but the business of viewing with alarm is in competent hands, and, anyway, I want to know whether this emergency is to be used as a sort of general amnesty for all who have been exploiting not only the Nazi war but the war on want as well.

PEGLER

Long before Hitler went crazy, our President told us that we were engaged in a war against want and there was an implied promise that there should be no profiteering the struggle, no exploitation of the great emergency for private gain in wealth or power. Recalling President Roosevelt's first inaugural address, I remember that it would have been almost heretical to suggest that anyone could be so low as to impose on the situation, and the noble mood of the people, with greedy or ambitious motives.

Since then certain discoveries have made me cynical, but I still hold that wrong done in the name of recovery and reform should not be allowed to go by default just because we are moving into another war.

NOW I have just been going through a book the size of a New York City directory, containing the transcript of an old trial of Umbrella Mike Boyle, the boss of the electricians' union in Chicago, who is so powerful there that he can threaten the whole city with paralysis just on his say-so.

He once raised all the bridges over the Chicago River and left them up, completely blockading these vital public works, the property of the whole people, or threatened to do so, I disremember which, to show his power over a small group of slightly skilled men and thus over the city.

IN New York, his opposite number, Harry Van Arsdale, made a similar demonstration for similar reasons only recently when he pulled a general strike of electricians on construction jobs, including war construction at the Brooklyn Yard, and blacked out Broadway at night.

I just hold that no one man, nor any relatively small group of men, should be allowed to possess this power to grab any community by the throat and that the National Government, which now rules us all, has a duty to break up this power of the few. This power was acquired under cover of the idealism for which we groped in the war on want and whenever the mists thinned out a little and some of us began to observe dark forms up to dirty work we got a few more grenades of that idealistic gas to obscure their doings.

Just lately this crook, Mike Boyle, of Chicago, has been blockading the installation of certain lights in a factory which is intended to build airplane engines for the Army because he doesn't approve the company which manufactured the lights. In calling him merely a crook I am almost flattering him, because the United States Circuit Court of Appeals once denounced him as "a highwayman, a betrayer of labor, a leech on commerce."

I have mentioned this before, but since then I have gone through this big book and at last have found what I was after.

I was looking for the part where it was brought out that as long ago as 1915 Boyle was blockading the products of certain manufacturers of electrical switchboards to the advantage of other manufacturers, all in the sacred name of labor, and that he owned stock in one of the favored companies. This occurred in the testimony of Roy O. Samson, a special agent of the Department of Justice, who helped prepare the prosecution in the course of which it was shown that Umbrella Mike had shaken down many builders, one of them for $20,000.

The agent swore that another defendant in the same case told him that he had turned over to Mike Boyle $19,000 worth of stock in the States Electric Co., and that by reason of that interest Mike was able to throw "a great deal of work" to the company.

NOT even Van Arsdale, red-hot unioneer that he is, and with a high tolerance for crooks in unions, can apologize for his colleague in the same international, Umbrella Mike. I mention Mike to Van Arsdale one day during a little conference and Van Arsdale turned his palms up shrugged and said he would prefer not to discuss Mike at all. However, Van Arsdale, in telling me of the recantation of two men whom he had been convicted of shooting in a union battle, clean forgot to mention that the two recanting brothers first got $15,000 out of the union treasury. So maybe it is just one of their ethics to speak no evil of one another lest too much truth come out and they lose their power.

How do we know Mike's motives now in disallowing the product of one manufacturer in favor of certain others, remembering that he once got a gift of stock in an interested competitor and was able to throw "a great deal of work" to his own company?

What is the point of all this, says you?

For God's sake, that is the very point of it! We all realize that such a man holds all this power over our second greatest city and we ask numbly what of it?

The Gallup Poll

Public Evenly Divided on Whether U. S. Should Have Joined League of Nations

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 22.—Discussion of the Anglo-American "Eight Points" for the post-war world has inevitably raised speculation about the possibility of another—and stronger—league of nations rising from the ashes of the old.

While the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration does not specifically refer to a post-war league, one interesting question is what the average man in the United States thinks about organizations of this kind.

Since the question may become of major importance in the months ahead—as it did in the last months of Woodrow Wilson's second term—the Institute has asked men and women in all parts of the United States:

"Do you think the United States should have joined the League of Nations after the last war?"

The answers indicate an almost perfectly even division of opinion on the question, with a substantial number "undecided" or without definite views:

Think U. S. Should Have Joined	37%
Think U. S. Should Not Have Joined	37
Undecided	26

Sentiment Growing?

Obviously much water has gone under the bridge since 1919, and a whole new generation has come to maturity since then. The replies are no indication of the way the country may have felt 22 years ago on Woodrow Wilson's plan.

Indeed, Institute surveys indicate there has been an interesting change of opinion regarding the League in the past four years, at least. For when the Institute asked voters in the fall of 1937, "Would you like to see the United States join the League of Nations?" two persons in every three were opposed.

Further studies have shown opinion divided almost 50-50 today on the question of joining a new post-war league.

Old Sectional Pattern

In the Senate fight on the League question 22 years ago bitterest opposition came from Midwestern leaders, as well as from Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, and other Easterners. In the present survey something of these old sectional lines remain.

The vote by sections is:

	Should Have Joined	Should Not Have Joined	Undecided
New Eng. and Mid-Atlantic	39%	36%	25%
East Central	35	39	26
West Central	27	45	28
South	39	30	31
West	42	35	23

Prevented War?

League advocates have sometimes argued—since the outbreak of the new European war—that U. S. participation in the "old League" would have prevented the development of many serious post-war problems in Europe and even have prevented the new conflict itself.

But the Institute survey indicates that the majority of Americans remain skeptical of this claim. Their comments show that they believe the "old League" was inescapably dominated by the interests of France and Britain, and that "America couldn't have done very much about Europe" during the critical 'twenties and early 'thirties.

Approximately two voters in every three with definite opinions regarding the question thought U. S. membership would not have prevented the present war.

Kent Arrives in New York Today

New York, Aug. 22.—The Duke of Kent, brother of King George, who has been visiting Canada for several weeks on official duty as air commodore of the Royal Air Force, will pass through New York City tomorrow afternoon on the way to spend the weekend with President Roosevelt.

He is scheduled to arrive at La Guardia Airport about 2:30 p. m. in an official party which will occupy three Lockheed-Hudson bombers, manned, of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The duke and his party will motor to President Roosevelt's country home at Hyde Park, N. Y. The route they will follow was kept secret. On Monday the duke will accompany the President back to Washington, and then fly to the U. S. Navy Yard at Norfolk, Va., returning to Washington for a dinner at the White House Monday night. He will inspect the Glenn L. Martin bomber plant at Baltimore Tuesday, return to Washington, and leave there for Canada Tuesday night.

Today's News Sidelight

New Pacific Naval Base First Visited by U. S. Ship in 1859

The recent commissioning of lonely mid-Pacific Johnston Island as a U. S. Naval Air Station is the climax of 80 years of intermittent interest in the island on the part of Uncle Sam, according to a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society.

"On the U. S. S. Fenimore Cooper, a schooner, Lieut. J. M. Brooke sailed up to the island and investigated it first for the U. S. Navy in 1859," says the Society's bulletin. "It was a brush-covered, bird-haunted knob of rock barely a half mile long and half as wide, the highest point on a submerged coral reef 8 miles long. For years thereafter its importance lay in its guano deposits, collected by an American company. When the company's lease expired, in 1926, the U. S. Department of the Interior proclaimed Johnston a bird reservation, since it was the undisturbed breeding place of thousands of winged creatures.

"Wings of another sort, however, cast their shadow over the isolated mid-Pacific bird refuge with the beginning of the trans-Pacific air routes. Seven years ago Johnston was made a U. S. Naval Defense Area, and all foreign vessels and aircraft were prohibited. It was considered as an alternate stopover for the Clipper planes' sky route between Hawaii and New Zealand, and was visited by the flier Capt. Musick and his Samoan Clipper shortly before the plane's fatal crash.

Johnston Island's nearest neighbors are the Hawaiian Islands, some 700 miles to the northeast. It is the only land in a vast unbroken stretch of the Pacific just south of the important transocean air route between Hawaii and Wake Island, the quickest line of communication between the United States and the Orient.

"Johnston has a less-than-mapping-size sister island, Sand Island, a short distance to the northeast on the same coral reef. Sometimes the two are referred to as the Johnston group.

"A British sea captain, who discovered the island on December 14, 1807, gave it his name. It is also known by the name of his vessel, the Cornwallis."

Recess Season Sends Senators on Vacations

Many Members Are Taking Advantage Of Respite From Demands of State To Steal Away With Their Families

By Carolyn Bell

"Among the missing" in social Washington this summer have been Senators and their wives who always add dash to any dinner, or tea party. It's not because they are out of town, certainly, but probably because the lawmakers have been up to their ears in work. However, with the Senate recessing every other day now, many a Senator and his family are taking advantage of the respite—to dash away for a much-needed vacation.

Senator Ralph Brewster will fly to Alaska on Monday on an inspection tour with the members of the Truman committee. After winding up the work that's to be done in that territory he hopes to join Mrs. Brewster in Dexter, Me., for a brief vacation. Mrs. Brewster left early in the summer for their home in New England.

Although he doesn't know yet whether pending legislation will allow him to get away, Senator Robert Taft—who has been hitting the headlines pretty regularly of late—hopes to get off to Canada before fall sets in. Mrs. Taft has been visiting at Pointe-au-Pic, in Canada, for about a month. Leaving town early this summer, she went first to their home in Ohio before continuing north.

Senator Lister Hill left early this week for a brief motor trip with Mrs. Hill. They met in North Carolina, where their young daughter is attending a summer camp, and plan to go motoring leisurely on from there. Mrs. Hill, before meeting the Senator, had been summering with her mother in Eufaula, Ala. Although the Senator expects to return in a week or two, Mrs. Hill will go back to Alabama for a few more weeks before coming to Washington.

Senator, Mrs. Barkley Staying in Capital

Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley have been staying close to Washington all summer and Mrs. Barkley says wistfully: "We have a mighty nice farm down in Paducah, Ky.—and they say its very pretty now." But she hopes to get off next month to the Blue Grass State and see that everything is ship-shape on the farm. The Senator has recently returned from Kentucky, where he made a lightning-quick trip to make a speech.

Mrs. Barkley has been spending a great deal of time with her daughter, Mrs. Max Truitt, who moved into a new home on Cathedral Avenue last week. Mr. Truitt, formerly a member of the Maritime Commission and recently resigned to practice law. They made their home in Burnt Mills Hills, Md., before moving into town.

Combining business with pleasure are Senator and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, who are sojourning in Estes Park, Colo. Making the Stanley Hotel their headquarters, the Andrews have been taking jaunts over the Western countryside. The Senator is a member of the Public Lands Committee of the Senate and they are meeting in Colorado. Following the meeting the Andrews hope to go to California before returning to the Capital.

Peppers Return From Maine

Hardly have they returned from one trip than Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper are making plans for another. The Senator will leave this weekend for Florida, to be gone until over Labor Day. Mrs. Pepper has not decided whether to join him or not.

They returned early this week from Poland Springs, Me., where they spent several days riding horseback and playing golf. The Senator made a speech at Biddleford, Me., while in that territory, and they were on hand to greet President Roosevelt when he arrived in Portland, Me., after his momentous meeting at sea with Prime Minister Churchill.

Senator and Mrs. "Happy" Chandler are at their home in Versailles, Ky., where they will remain until after Labor Day.

Mrs. Harry H. Schwartz, wife of Senator Schwartz, of Wyoming, is summering in Rehoboth Beach, Del., with her younger children. The Senator, at the moment, is visiting in Wyoming. Miss Chuyler Schwartz, an older daughter, has been spending the season in Wyoming, where she has a job.

Maj. Dodenhoff, Eleanor Carrere To Wed Sept. 3

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Auguste Carrere, of New Orleans, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Carrere, to Maj. David Ivy Dodenhoff, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., son of Mrs. William Harry Dodenhoff, now of New Orleans, formerly of West Point, Miss., and the late William Harry Dodenhoff, of West Point. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride in New Orleans on September 3.

Miss Carere is a graduate of Sacred Heart Academy and H. Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, where she was a member of the Pi Beta Phi Sorority. While she has never made a formal debut, she has taken an active part in the various social activities of the younger set and has received a number of carnival honors in various Mardi Gras balls.

Maj. Dodenhoff, who is now in Washington on active duty in the office of the Undersecretary of War, is a graduate of the Citadel in civil engineering. He received his C. E. degree at the University of South Carolina and attended the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard University. He is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Pi Beta Phi Tea Set Sept. 5

Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club, of Washington, will give a tea September 5 at the home of Mrs. Samuel Spruce, province president, for girls from this locality entering colleges next session.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Eccleston is in charge of invitations, which are going out to several hundred girls this week.

Mrs. R. H. Pledger, president of the Washington senior alumnae group, assisted by Mrs. Victor Knoop, junior alumnae president, will receive the guests.

Mrs. Maurice Davison is inviting a group of mothers of the girls to assist in serving refreshments in the garden. Mrs. Sidney H. Karr is in charge of the list of colleges to be represented.

Mrs. Clark Ober is general chairman for the party, at which there will be an exhibition of work from the Phi Beta Pi settlement school, which the sorority owns and operates in the mountains of Tennessee. Mis Marion McCoy will be in charge of the display of hand-woven textiles, basketry and jewelry made in the settlement.

Mrs. E. J. Cameron To Teach Speech To Class of Club

Mrs. Edwin J. Cameron will become instructor of the speech training class of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., at its session at 3 p. m. Tuesday.

The class was organized recently to train speakers on defense subjects, to be on call by the club and other organizations. Mrs. Cameron, a member of the club, belongs to its drama section. She will succeed Mrs. Raymond Sanford, who has been teaching the speech class.

Mrs. Edgar Fowler, defense chairman of the club, announced yesterday that a nutrition class would start the second week in September as a part of its defense activities.

Lieut. Itkin Reports Back to His Post

Lieut. and Mrs. Karl Itkin, who were married July 27 in the Jewish Community Center with the Rev. Hugo Schiff officiating, spent their honeymoon in Asbury Park, N. J., and New York City.

Lieut. Itkin has reported back to his post at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and his wife is remaining in Washington.

The bride was given in marriage by her father at the 6 o'clock ceremony with Miss Shirley Goldberg as her maid of honor. Lieut. Paul Neff served as best man.

The bride attended George Washington University, and Lieut. Itkin was graduated from Cooper Union College.

President of C. A. R. Plans to Visit Capital

Mrs. Louise Moseley Heaton, president of the Children of the American Revolution, who is now vacationing in Hendersonville, N. C., will arrive here in September to confer with other officials at headquarters.

Mrs. Heaton will attend the Georgia convention of the C. A. R. early in September, and later in the fall will attend similar meetings in Maine and Pennsylvania.

George Abell Gives Cocktail Party for English Visitor

Sir Anthony Jenkinson, young British writer, has arrived in Washington for a stay of several days and is the guest of George Abell in his apartment on Twentieth Street. In collaboration with Lester Hemingway, brother of Novelist Ernest, Sir Anthony wrote a series of articles on German activities in Central America which attracted wide notice.

Mr. Abell was host at a cocktail party on Thursday afternoon at his apartment. Among the guests were Senator Arthur Capper, the Netherlands Minister Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Rev. Joseph Coad, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dempsey and Jean Delattre Seguy.

College Girls Do Their Bit

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Studying for Six Years to Be a Singer, Girl of 20 Loses Limb in Accident; Must She Relinquish Hopes of Career As Vocalist?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, badly in need of your advice. For the past six years, I studied with vigor to become a singer. Then, when just on the verge of starting my career, I was maimed in an accident. My right leg has been amputated at the hip joint, and I don't feel that I can ever be a success as an entertainer now, despite my pretty face and lovely figure.

Several attempts have been made to fit me with an artificial limb, but without success. At this time, I am entirely dependent on a crutch to get about. However, I manage exceedingly well, considering the short time I have been crippled, but I have plenty of heartaches, too. I was always fond of dressy pumps, but find it quite difficult to wear one now. Do you think I can learn again?

My reason for writing is to ask your opinion on the advisability of my going ahead as a singer. Would it be possible for me to succeed? I am sure I have the voice for it; but I just can't picture any girl so maimed succeeding as an entertainer. Even now, when I go shopping people stare holes through me. Sometime I think I will go insane.

This may strike you as an unusual appeal, and I suppose it is. However, I have never seen another girl with just one leg, which is why I feel so depressed. It sounds silly, I know. There must be hundreds of them. Yet I feel as though I am the only one. Miss Haworth, do you know any girls in my profession—as models, teachers, bookkeepers, etc.—with one leg? If you do, I would like to hear of them. If I knew of a single case, it would give me courage to carry on.

My home is in California, and when there, I used to read The Post very often. Now, I am staying with friends here in Tennessee, and The Post isn't for sale on the news stands of this city. But I remembered your column, and if it isn't asking too much, I would like you to mail me a copy of the issue which contains your reply to me. I sincerely hope you can give me some helpful advice. Thank you so much. Gratefully,
JEAN.

Artistic Contribution May Yet Be Made

DEAR JEAN: If you have a first class singing voice, there is a place for you, I am sure, in the field of radio entertainment—where the nature of your physical handicap need never be known to the bulk of your audience. Yet, supposing it should become known, it would only endear you the more to your hearers, if already you had sung your way into their hearts. Because, drinking in your music, they would be reminded of how valiantly you had overcome obstacles; and would derive from your example the high hope and courage to press on to victory in coping with their trials, whatever they might be.

Furthermore, you have in this deprivation, sustained at the very outset of your career, a great potential advantage over complacently footloose aspirants to musical fame. Whereas with them, the temptation is irresistibly ever-present to fritter time and energy in frivolous pursuits, you, who are now required to be economically purposeful in your comings and goings, will instinctively create compensatory outlets for your vitality, and your natural first choice should consist in concentrating 100 per cent on perfecting your artistic talent. Also, new disciplines to be learned, as a result of the handicap; new perspective acquired, as a result of suffering and readjustment; and sensitivity to other persons' reactions made more acute, as a result of your feeling somewhat set apart from the rushing stream of humanity—all will add depth and gravity to your personality, giving you a special quality of life-understanding to bring to your singing, which the average ambitious young vocalist of untried soul and untested character does not possess.

Discussing your situation with a medical man (in the hope of hearing it may yet be possible to fit you with a proportion-restoring artificial limb), I was heartened (as you must be) by this statement of his: "Persons who overcome a handicap enroute to success go far and away beyond what they would have accomplished if they had been spared that handicap. This was true of Edison, who found deafness an asset, guarding his creative thought against the distraction of perpetual noise. True also of Beethoven, who conceived his greatest melodies in the silence of a similar handicap. True in a different sense of President Roosevelt, who triumphed over paralysis in a manner which not only paved the way to succoring thousands of others from the same affliction, but prepared him in spirit to be an acknowledged world leader in the present crisis. And look," said the doctor, "at the case of Helen Keller—deaf, dumb and blind from early childhood—who became a famous personage of our time, noted for her gracious, cultivated mind."

You have asked whether I know of any young professional women handicapped as you are. It so happens that I don't. But there was much in the newspapers, a year or so ago, about a beautiful young woman in one of the artistic professions who lost both legs in an automobile accident. Thereafter, she became a radio personality, her stock-in-trade being her balanced, contagiously sunny outlook on life, which she expressed in philosophical chats over the air. She was last in the news, I believe, when she married a school day sweetheart.

And perhaps you know of Connie Boswell, a cripple since the age of four, whose ballad singing nevertheless has been aclaimed on two continents. Now appearing in solo performances, Connie first gained fame as a member of the Boswell Sisters' trio. When the trio dissolved in 1936, Connie elected to carry on alone and is doing very well, although dependent upon a wheel chair for locomotion. You may also recall that Sarah Bernhardt wore an artificial limb in her later years, without suffering any loss of popular favor or dramatic prestige.

Such instances as these should give you the courage you need to see you triumphantly through the period of readjustment immediately ahead. They should convince you beyond a shadow of a doubt that, "Where there's a will, there's a way;" that obstacles may be made into stepping stones to progress, by the brave hearted person blessed with special gifts.

Your heartache at being deprived of "dressy pumps," while understandable, seems also rather absurd to, cherish, in the circumstances. I would argue in favor of being sturdily shod for sure-footedness, to promote grace of movement as well as to provide insurance against possible falls. But the orthopedic surgeon who is endeavoring to fit you with an artificial limb is the person to properly advise you about footwear.

However, while on the subject, I want to say this: Don't ever despair of finding the most gratifying supplementary walking equipment. Talk with the best orthopedic surgeons all over the country, as opportunity affords. In this age of miracles in science, what doesn't exist today often develops tomorrow—and it is not too much to hope that you may yet find the means of putting two feet to the ground. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Wooing Health, Girl Becomes Great Dancer

By Martha Ellya

CLOUDS HAVE silver linings in real life as well as in lyrics. In 1910 in El Paso, Tex., a baby girl was born who, four years later, was to be the victim of infantile paralysis. But this affliction did not keep Nana Gollner from making her debut at the age of 15 as a ballerina with Max Reinhardt's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The years between had been busy ones for Nana. Not long after her affliction struck, Nana left El Paso with her parents for California. Eager to find a way to restore their daughter's health, the Gollners decided to provide her with a great sandbox filled with sands from Monterey, where she could exercise and play. Here Nana, between the ages of 4 and 12, dug her little toes into the sand; doing the cat crawl recommended by health authorities for strengthening feet and muscles. During this time she was taught by private tutors, who included music in her curriculum. The combination of playing in the deep sand and listening to music caught the interest of Nana, until at the age of 12 she was completely consumed with the desire to become a professional dancer.

Studied With Kosloff

Theodore Kosloff, famous for his dancing, was engaged as her teacher. He worked with her until her feet finally responded in a normal manner. So captivated was Nana with dancing that she thought of little else. This was a shock to her parents. She was an only child and they had not aspired to a dancing career for her. However, the persistence of their daughter won their consent and at the age of 15 she made her debut. A London appearance followed, which extended into a continental tour for Nana, who danced not only in England, Scotland and India, but also at the Paris Exposition in 1937.

In 1939 this classic dancer was back in her own country with critics proclaiming her the greatest of American ballerinas. Secure in this fame, she decided to put aside dancing and take up a new "love"—aviation. At home in airminded California, Miss Gollner went into aviation seriously at Mines Field, Los Angeles, and now has 168 flying hours to her credit. However, dancing is once more taking the lead in her life, and the young dancer isn't flying as she feels it is not fair to her public.

Nana Gollner will be seen at the Watergate Theater when the San Carlo Opera Company, under the direction of Fortune Gallo, dancing in the original Ballet Russe, from August 23 to August 29.

She Was Once Paralytic

SAND BOX EXERCISES, begun at the age of 4, started Nana Gollner (above), leading American ballerina (who will dance here August 23 to August 29), on the road to health and glory, after a poliomyelitis seizure

There Is Fun In Building Modest Home

THE JOYS of puttering around a garden, of seeing your property grow lovelier year by year! You never know what fun it is to fix up a home until you have one of your own. And that's where a Federal Housing Administration loan may help you—as these questions and answers show.

Q. What's the maximum FHA loan?

A. Loans are available for homes valued up to $20,000. For a property up to $6000 you need only make a 10 per cent down payment. For example, with $400 you could buy an existing $4000 property or you could build a home of the same value. Your loan would be $3600 and monthly payments would be $20.90 over a 25-year period.

Q. I want a house that won't get out-dated; what type of architecture do you advise?

A. Stick to authentic styles without folderol—Cape Cod, Colonial. The house in our picture, though small, has charm.

Q. What is a good inexpensive type of roofing for small houses?

A. Wood or asphalt shingles.

Much more advice on construction is given in our 40-page booklet, "Low-Cost Homes—Planning, Financing, Building." Includes photographs and plans for 20 homes. Explains FHA financing; also remodeling old houses.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Low-Cost Homes—Planning, Financing, Building," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

As Hems Go Higher, Legs Must Be Lovely

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU HAVEN'T a good pair of legs to stand on, you may appreciate the warning that fall styles will be short. Since 17 inches from the floor is now almost considered conservative, this probably means skirts will inch up a fraction.

The women who have lovely legs won't mind. But if you happen to be among the other 95 per cent, you may want to do something about the situation and summer is certainly the time to start.

For one thing, swimming is excellent legwork. And for another, you can walk barefoot in the sand at the beach.

Fine For the Legs

Tramping over a golf course is fine for your leg muscles. If you have the slightest tendency to knock knees, you couldn't do better than take up bicycling. Pedaling forces you to hold your legs correctly and counteracts the inclination to rotate the thighs inward.

But even without being footloose you can make good strides toward improving the contours of your legs. Kick off your pumps, turn on the radio, and skip about the room in your bare feet. Then stand in the same place with feet parallel, and rise on the toes of one foot as you press the heel of the other down against the floor.

Take a tip from some of the girls who are said to have the most beautiful legs in the world, and make the habit of walking about the house without your shoes. When you go up and down stairs, do your climbing and descending on tiptoes. And stop at a step for a minute while you get in an exercise: Stand with the foot half on, half off the step, and rise on toes, then lower heel below the edge of the step.

Practice Knee Bend

For some real exercise, practice the old deep-knee bend. Rise on toes of both feet, then, very slowly and without letting heels touch floor go into a deep knee bend.

To turn that into a dual duty—exercise which contracts the muscles of one leg while stretching those of the other leg—go into a deep knee bend on one leg as you swing the other straight out in front, heel pointed. Well, you can try! If you need props, stand between two chairs, seats turned inward so that your hands can rest on them and lower yourself toward the floor.

'Cannon Instead Of Gadgets' to Be U. S. Watchword

Now it's "guns or butter" for the United States. Only, as the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., points out in a recently issued pamphlet, it's not literally "butter"—but rather certain mechanical luxuries treasured especially by housewives.

Americans' sacrifice isn't going to consist in pulling in their belts or trying not to shudder when they choke down ersatz foods, the pamphlet shows. They can go to the movies more often, have more haircuts and permanent waves, consume larger quantities of food, wear plenty of wool and cotton textiles, have glassware, crockery and personal household supplies.

Among the goods for civilian use whose manufacture must be cut down to aid the armament program, according to this survey, are automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, electric and gas ranges, automatic furnaces and other steel, nickel and aluminum bearing household equipment.

Hooray! Hooray! Hooray! 'Here Comes Mr. Jordan'

New Robert Montgomery Comedy, at the Earle, Lends Familiar Theme New Treatment and Zest; Stage Revue and Shorts Round Out an Ace Bill

"HERE COMES MR. JORDAN." Columbia picturization of the play, "Heaven Can Wait," by Harry Segall, adapted to the screen by Sidney Buchman and Seton I. Miller, starring Robert Montgomery, with Claude Rains, Evelyn Keyes, Rita Johnson, Edward Everett Horton, James Gleason, John Emery, Donald MacBride, Don Costello, Halliwell Hobbes and Benny Rlbin. Directed by Alexander Hall. At the Earle Theater.

"HERE COMES MR. JORDAN," Columbia's latest surprise "fantasy," at the Earle, is unique among modern comedies and as richly amusing as it is imaginative and resourceful in its mortalizing of the supernatural. It is, at once, a film play that should be seen from the beginning in the interest of greatest clarity.

Indeed, it is a picture which, less deftly manipulated, might have been infinitely abstruse, dealing as it does with the reembodiment of departed spirits in bodies not their own, but still capable of fulfilling their destinies on earth. In the instant case, these destinies are all on the side of humanity, honesty and justice, giving the developments something of the flavor of a "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" or a "Meet John Doe."

The basic idea of "Here Comes Mr. Jordan"—the reincarnation of human consciousness and conscience, with the slightly eerie concomitants of invisibility and inaudibility, when desired—is new here only in the skill of its treatment. Earlier utilizations of the identical dramatic thesis would include "Liliom," "The Heavenly Express," "Outward Bound," "On Borrowed Time," the "Topper" pictures, "Our Town," "Death Takes a Holiday," "The Return of Peter Grimm" and almost as long an additional list of stage and screen successes as one might wish to compile. But here the thing has been given novelty and new zest by both the adroitness of its writing and the expertness of its playing by an especially competent cast.

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan" is particularly shrewd in making its central character—who happens not to be Mr. Jordan—a prize fighter, who is snatched from his crashing plane by a "heavenly collector" in anticipation of his death, which is thus prevented. Before his spirit can be restored to its own body, the fight manager, with the impetuosity of his breed, has cremated the remains and, for the time being, poor, isolated Joe Pendleton, who was about to become light-heavyweight champion, has no place to go. So Mr. Jordan, the Elysian overseer, places him temporarily in the husk of Bruce Farnsworth, millionaire playboy, who has just been drowned in his bathtub by his wife and his confidential secretary. Mr. Pendleton, as Mr. Farnsworth, rights many grievous wrongs and falls in love in the process. Still intent on his fight, Joe is knocked cold in Mr. Farnsworth's shell and then takes over the body of another contender knocked off by his pals, and wins both the title and the girl.

Played as Mortal, Not Supernatural, Drama

All this, no doubt, sounds as complex and baffling as we insist the play is not. This comparative plausibility is attributable primarily to the sagacity of the authors, but in equal degree to the comic effectiveness of Robert Montgomery in the pivotal role and the instinctive humor of such veterans at fun as Claude Rains, James Gleason and Edward Everett Horton. The play's social implications are expressed by Evelyn Keyes, Kay Johnson, John Emery and Halliwell Hobbes, as a slightly nonplused butler in the Farnsworth home. Mr. Rains is the guiding genius of departed souls; Mr. Horton his overzealous "collector" and Mr. Gleason the bewildered fight manager, a type of role at which he has been adept since 'way back in the days of "Is Zat So!" Miss Keyes gives great promise of future eminence as "the girl," and Miss Johnson and Mr. Emery are archplotters whose sinister murders fail to kill. They combine to make their vehicle by far the brightest of the season's thoughtful comedies.

Stage Revue Is Also Snappy

The stage revue at the Earle this week likewise is a rollicking business, dominated by Jay and Lou Seiler as a team of masters of ceremonies as well as the zany comedians who do the hazardous stunts on those semicircular skis. After they have been introduced by Eileen Ritter, they perform similar honors for Ray and Arthur, two muscular Adonises at the top of the class as hand-balancers; Lucille Johnson, a soprano, who sings with fine discretion, and the Roxyettes, en toto, in their tom-tom and roller-skating routines, both of which are turbulent and tricky.

The newsreel renders an encouraging report on the preparedness of the Philippines, through the voice and photography of Arthur Menken, globe-trotting lens expert, and a Technicolor short subject, "Lions for Sale," on the famous Gay lion farm, in California, is lent humor by Commentator Manning, who sounds surprisingly like Pete Smith. It all adds up to a "must see" bill of superlative entertainment.

Simplifies an Abstruse Comedy

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

who brings one of his most able characterizations to the screen in the stellar role of Columbia's new comedy-fantasy, "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," now on view at the Earle.. Claude Rains, James Gleason, Evelyn Keyes, Kay Johnson and John Emery are foremost in a supporting cast that also includes Edward Everett Horton and Halliwell Hobbes

Buck Combines Earlier Films For Met's 'Jungle Cavalcade'

By Richard L. Coe

True to its title, Frank Buck's "Jungle Cavalcade" is exactly that. The Metropolitan's new attraction is a compilation frq mthe "Bring 'Em Back Alive" man's lively spools of adventure, the better parts of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," "Wild Cargo" and "Fang and Claw." Because the next several years will bring even fewer such jungle jaunts than the past two, you'll find the collection both novel and refreshing.

That is, of course, if you relish such fellow creatures as pythons, tigers, leopards, elephants, birds of paradise, pelicans, flying foxes, mouse deer, gibbons and other assorted apes. Some don't and aren't likely to be seen pushing their way into the Metropolitan this week. This reporter finds such things wondrous fascinating and was to be found with other kindred spirits banging on the doors of the Met at 11 sharp yesterday morning.

Naturally, the highlights of three other Buck films make for an ample supply of animal catching when tossed into a single feature. The tortuous python battles a leopard, takes on a tiger. A reclutant pelican proves an accomplished goose. A small herd of Ceylonese elephants is captured for American zoos. Those flying foxes are still the most sinister looking of the jungle's citizens. A pigful of pork chops furnishes a gigantic meal for the endless python.

Feel That Magic Eye!

As in all such films, the camera itself seems to belie the terrors of death that beset Buck and his native henchmen. One is constantly conscious of the magic eye, much more so than in the superb and memorable film Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt gave us in "Dark Rapture." By a curious chance, Denis directed the "Wild Cargo" excerpts of this release, but from the close integration the three films have undergone, it is impossible to tell which was made under his influence.

The python's escape from his "carelesly closed" box, for instance, is pretty obviously staged for even such an immature intelligence as this reporter's. Nor is Buck's earlier, unexpected meeting with another such reptile any more convincing. Interesting as these encounters are, they destroy completely the documentary possibilities of the Buck adventures.

Comedy isn't forgotten in this melee of wild-life stalking. Once again, the gibbons and monkeys which we humans so beguilingly resemble do the clowning for Mr. B., with an anxious honey bear cub doing his part to make life lighter. Buck himself recites the narrative, employing such Buckmade jungle laws as "Be Prepared, Be Resourceful and Be Gone." The rest of the film's I. Q., though, employing a soundtrack isn't much help to the score of ancient war-horses tied together by Nathaniel Shilkret and some dubbed-in animal sounds that won't fool you.

But aside from such disillusioning detail, we zoologists can have a nice vicarious adventure at Mr. Buck's Calvacade.

A Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Lassoo Wizards;" a Roscoe Karns comedy, "Half Shot at Sunrise," that is outstandingly without a single laugh, and Cameraman Arthur Menken's views of the Philippines supplement the latest newsreels to complete the bill.

Preview Peeks at Pictures

IRENE DUNNE

"UNFINISHED BUSINESS," with Irene Dunne and Bob Montgomery, is light comedy blended with drama. Both very good with Irene not quite matching up to her "Penny Serenade" performance, although audience agreed she was never more beautifully groomed or lovely to look at. Preston Foster gets the acting kudos for this one.

Alexander Korda's "Lydia," with Merle Oberon and Joseph Cotten. Film strong on atmosphere and beautifully done, especially a slow-motion sequence of Merle and Cotten ascending a wide staircase to a ballroom. Shot lasts for fully three minutes and drew spontaneous applause. Alan Marshall not too sympathetic in a small part, and ending is probably due for alteration, since Merle plays a "bad woman" who goes unpunished.

"BEFORE THE FACT" starring Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine. Joan breathtakingly lovely and surpassing her "Rebecca" role. Audience loved both of them but Director Hitchcock's ending rather confusing and probably due for a change.

"ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS" with Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall . . . usual fare, but Technicolor too obvious. Dotty's sarongs and the volcano eruptions, both terrific.

Whenever a gal who has had some success in the movies, like Gale Page in "Four Daughters," "Four Mothers" and as the wife of "Knute Rockne," says she is going to retire from films, after having secured a divorce, I always like to investigate. I find that Gale is at her mother's summer home in Oregon, and that Count de Listo is her guest. It is reported that wedding bells will ring for them in about a year when his divorce becomes final. When the Count's wife secured her divorce, the Court allowed her to retain her titles obtained through their marriage, based on the claim that she paid about $250,000 for them. Now I'm just wondering, if she owns the titles will there be any left for Gale? Maybe just being Mrs. de Listo is enough. Love is wonderful.

Walt Disney seems to have the right idea. He's taking a group of his staff to South America this month, gathering material for a series of short animated pictures, based on their literature, legend, customs and humor. Although he'll draw material from Latin-American sources and work in cooperation with native artists and musicians, the pictures are being made for the North American market.

Remember Todd Karns, Roscoe's son, who did such a swell job in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary?" Well, we'll see him again as leading man with Jane Withers in "Young America," starting this week . . . Sally Bond, only unmarried member of the original "Hellzapoppin" chorus, has been receiving mysterious offers of marriage by mail and just discovered that Olsen and Johnson have been placing ads in her name in "lonely-heart" magazines . . . What a pair of pals!

RKO-Keith's

Chills-and fever farce continues to ice the veins and pop the buttons a second week at RKO-Keith's. Abbott and Costello, those fabulous fellows from the "smoker circuits," probably would be performing that dual chore no matter what their vehicle, but the present implement of their insanity happens to be an eerie item known by the title of "Hold That Ghost."

"Hold That Ghost" is a prodigious potpourri of burlesque's most cherished skits, expanded, refined and simonized into a full-lengt\ feature picture that takes a more immediate hold upon audience risibilities than either "Buck Privates" or "In the Navy," its two predecessors that hoisted its comics to the top of the cinema heap.

In addition to all the usual "ha'nted house" business, "Hold That Ghost" contrives also to hold a bit of music. Ted Lewis and his orchestra furnish what might be termed prologue and epilogue for the lunacy that comes in between, and the Andrews Sisters deliver themselves of a couple of songs in the grand or "production" manner.

The short subjects, including Mr. Hitler's bogus plea for "Peace," are being held over with the shivery main attraction.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

This One Should Be a Hit!

Hollywood, Aug. 22 (INS).—The magic name of Joe DiMaggio, the hero of every baseball fan in America, will be headlined in a movie. Yes, indeed, the pride of the Yankees, with hits in 56 consecutive games to his credit (the all-time record), is to be starred in "The Great DiMaggio," a movie sponsored by Nat Goldstone, Robert Taylor's agent and representative of other Hollywood biggies. DiMaggio will come to Hollywood with his two brothers, Vince and Dominic, whom he insists must appear in the DiMaggio opus with him.

CARY GRANT

Instead of being the life story of the baseball champ, the movie will actually revolve around Joe's father, a San Francisco fisherman who wanted his boys to join him in this business and who made great sacrifices for them. Mrs. Joe DiMaggio, formerly Dorothy Arnold, who, by the way, is expecting the stork, was in the movies and Joe himself made a picture several years ago. With "The Life of Lou Gehrig" and now the DiMaggio movie, it looks like a baseball year.

The Cary Grant-Barbara Hutton romance isn't cold, as some people think. But you can bet your new fall hat there's no marriage in the immediate offing—if at all. In the meantime, when Cary returns from his Mexican vacation, he's got a date at RKO for the I. A. R. Wylie story, "Keeper of the Flames," and once again he'll be seen as a newspaper reporter. This time he covers the assassination of a governor and gets onto a hot story about his excellency's shady political past. There's just one little tip I'd like to give Cary: I know he has tried in every way not to capitalize on his friendship with "the richest girl in the world"—but he has stepped on the toes of many of the local camera lads. There are always two ways to say "no" to these boys, who really understand.

Paramount is giving Frances Gifford, the serial "Jungle Girl," her best break to date. She will be the femme headliner in Harry Sherman's first big feature. It's really a break for the young lady, for Sherman makes pictures that sell. The "Hopalong Cassidy" series and his "Parson of Panamint" have proved that he knows what the public enjoys. "The Parson of Panamint" has been a sensation, for it wasn't what you might call an expensive picture, yet it has brought in more profits than some of the million dollar epics. Frances and Bob are frequently seen at the Hollywood ball park and dining at the Derby and she really is one of movieland's prettiest girls.

Red Skelton, MGM's fair-haired boy among the comics, (Red says he's the poor man's Abbott and Costello) isn't going to have a chance to read his reviews if they keep putting him in picture after picture. After he finishes "Panama Hattie" he goes into "I'll Take Manila," with Eleanor Powell, in which Red plays a nervous writer of mystery yarns and Eleanor is a G-gal. I think the funniest story Red tells is about his father; he swears his dad thought he was crazy, for years—and he isn't sure the old man wasn't right. Red's wife, Edna, is really his severest critic, and passes on all his stories.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Maxine Lewis, sister of Mrs. William Powell and Red Golden, Bob Leonard's assistant, are headed toward the altar; Betty Avery, once the big moment in Pat Di Cicco's life, is now seeing Hollywood with Joe Brown, of the Plaza Hotel. Pat, of course, has eyes only for Little Floria Vanderbilt; Shirley Temple, now a big girl with brown hair and a slim figure, lunched with her favorite actor, Clark Gable.

Three Montgomery County lumber dealers have agreed to plank down a dollar for each selectee inducted from the county.

The idea was originated by Russell Mizell, Kensington lumber dealer. He induced two other dealers—D. M. Blandford, of Rockville, and I. S. Turover, of Bethesda—to aid him.

Arlington Boy, 12, Saves Woman, Two Children in Burning House

Carries Youngsters To Safety, Wakens Sleeping Mother

Danny Cross, 12, of Arlington, Va., was trying out his new bicycle which he got just yesterday when a fire broke out in a nearby house. Outdistancing his companions who were on foot, Danny raced to the burning home and saved a mother and her two children.

Mrs. R. P. Summers, 1542 North Danville Street, Arlington, was taking a nap, and her children, Bobby, 2, and Jean, 4, were huddled near a door trying to escape from the choking smoke when Danny arrived. He telephoned the fire department, awakened the mother and then carried the two children to safety.

One of the rooms in the Summers' home was badly charred by the blaze and County Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel estimated damage at about $1000. He said cause of the fire could not be immediately determined.

"The two babies," Danny said, "might have been overcome by the smoke if they hadn't been standing close to the door that leads to the screened back porch. They were able to get some air there.

"Mrs. Summers was so excited at first she didn't seem to know what to do. So I took the children out."

Danny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Cross, 1613 North Danville Street, Arlington. He finished at the James Monroe Elementary School last June and will enter the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School this fall.

He's mighty proud of his bicycle and he's glad it turned out to be so useful.

"I'm paying for it myself," he said. "I earn my money by delivering papers, cutting grass and taking care of babies. I took care of Mrs. Summers' children just a week ago."

Police Still In Dark Over Missing Officer

FLIPPIN

Last night there were no new clews to the disappearance of the 32-year-old motorcycle patrolman who lived at 6022 Lee Boulevard, Fairfax, Va.

Flippin left his wife and 16-month-old daughter shortly after noon July 3 to come to Washington to transact some personal business and to spend a few hours canoeing. He rented the canoe about 3 p. m.

When the policeman did not report for duty the next morning, a search was begun by harbor police and Capt. Clement P. Cox, Flippin's commanding officer. Flippin's automobile was found parked near the boathouse and it apparently had been there all night, police said.

A harbor patrol boat, exploring the coves and inlets of the upper Potomac, located the canoe tied up on the Virginia shore about 1 mile below Chain Bridge about 11:30 a. m. July 4.

Investigation disclosed two Negroes had found the canoe on the District shore and thinking it had broken its moorings towed it across the river until the owner could be located.

A pair of blue police trousers with Flippin's name in them were found rolled up under a seat in the bow of the boat. The trouser pockets were empty and nothing else was found in the canoe.

Examination of the trousers showed that they had not been wet.

Had Borrowed on Insurance

It was learned by the investigators that Flippin borrowed $500 against his life insurance a short time before he disappeared.

Lieut. H. H. Carlin, harbor master and veteran of some 20 years' experience around the river, said yesterday that had Flippin drowned, his body would have come to the surface between one and three days afterward "unless it was weighted."

Police have discussed one other possibility—that the body came to the surface and floated downstream unnoticed.

War May Help UniteSects,McNary Tells Zionists

Hope that end of the war will bring a strengthening of ties among all religions was voiced yesterday by Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, minority leader, in a letter to Rabbi Isadore Breslau, executive director of the Zionist Organization of America.

In a message of greeting to the rabbi and delegates who will assemble in Cincinnati, Ohio, for the annual convention September 6 to 9, the legislator declared: "Let us hope that from this tragic upheaval will come a strengthening of ties between all religions and peoples dedicated to the advancement of mankind and the dignity of the human spirit."

The Zionist convention convenes at a time "filled with portent for all humanity" said McNary, who with Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, heads the American Palestine Committee.

Transfer Void For Members Of Loan Board

Members of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will remain in Washington while nearly 1000 of their employes start moving to New York next month, it was announced yesterday.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the FHLBB, said that President Roosevelt and Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones had approved a change in plans, which will permit the board members to stay in Washington.

Also scheduled to remain in Washington are nearly 200 persons employed by the FHLB System and by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, also under supervision of the FHLB Board.

Fahey said that they will start moving to New York about the middle of September and complete the transfer before October 1.

Their removal from Washington will release about 100,000 square feet of office space "urgently needed by defense units," Fahey said.

Freeman Elected Shrine Treasurer For 27th Year

Charles D. Freeman, of Washington, was reelected treasurer of the Ancient Egyptian Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, by acclamation yesterday at the Shriners' convention in Buffalo, N. Y., the Associated Press reported.

The organization unanimously adopted a resolution urging "fair treatment on the usual democratic basis" for Negroes in the services and defense industries.

Opponents Of New Time Lead in Poll

Ballots in Post Survey Reveal Majority Against Daylight Savings

Opponents of daylight saving time in The Post's poll led yesterday by a margin of 24 votes.

Of 192 ballots received, the score was 108 against daylight time and 84 in favor.

There was strong sentiment among those who want the clocks changed for a year-round schedule of "fast time." Many of those who commented favorably on the plan suggested Washington switch over and take the lead in making daylight time universal across the country.

Some who voted for the change said they wanted it "if the President wants it" and if it would aid national defense.

No Saving Seen

The majority of those opposed to the idea contended there would be no saving in electric power (the Administration's purpose in proposing Nation-wide daylight time), because it would still be dark when citizens are forced to get up in the morning "and nearly every home" would be ablaze with light long before time to go to work.

This, it was further contended, would consume "as much or more" electric power "than a few downtown office buildings."

The plan repeatedly was referred to by opponents as "daylight foolish time." Many felt the present system of "stagger hours" served the purpose of daylight time here.

"It is just plain dumb," said one voter.

Fear Being Cheated

Others said they didn't want to be "cheated" by the clocks and complained at the prospect of early rising in order to get downtown in time for work.

A large share of the opposition came from housewives and mothers who don't want to get breakfast and their children off to school an hour earlier.

In conducting the daylight time poll, The Post is cooperating with the District Commissioners in an effort to determine public sentiment.

The Commissioners have agreed to abide by public reaction to the proposal and are kept in daily touch with results of the poll.

Attached to this report is a ballot which may be filled in and mailed or brought to The Post. Other ballots are available in The Post lobby.

Office Planned To Hear Plaints On Rent Increases

An office to receive complaints about rent increases in the District will be opened sometime next week by the subcommittee on consumers' interests of the District Defense Council, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, chairman of the subcommittee.

Information on the complaints will be tabulated, she said, and sent to the Commissioners in an effort to determine whether rent control is needed here under present defense boom conditions.

At a meeting of the group yesterday with Justin C. Stewart, of the OPACS consumer division, it was decided to check on retail prices as well as rents. Mrs. Lorenz said they would try to institute a daily radio broadcast on retail price conditions and would keep close watch on price and quality changes.

bicycle, was Billie Virgin, 13, who lives in the same house with Buddy.

A third youngster, Charles Buchanon, 11, of 455 I Street Northwest, had just come out of his home and called to Billie. Buddy apparently thought Charles was calling him and ran toward Charles.

Buddy dashed from between two parked cars and was struck by the sedan which, one witness said, was traveling eastward and "going plenty fast."

An unidentified Negro picked the child's body up in the middle of the street and carried it to the sidewalk in front of Charles' house.

Mrs. Dorothy Upton, of Woodridge, Va., was attempting to cross I Street from the north curb and was just a car length away from Buddy when he was struck.

"I was waiting to cross the street with my little boy and girl," Mrs. Upton said, "and had looked both ways. There was nothing coming and I started just as the car sped up. He was going so fast I looked after him and saw the little boy rolling in the street."

Sure the Driver Knew

Mrs. Upton was crossing from between two parked cars and Buddy ran out from behind the car just east of her.

"I saw the driver slow up and look back and I know he saw the child in the street," Mrs. Upton declared. "But he didn't stop. I got a glimpse of him when he turned but I don't think I could identify him."

Emma Brevard, Negro, of 3623 M Street Northwest, saw the car speed away and took down a license number, but a checkup by police proved it was not the correct number.

All repair shops and garages were being searched last night for the automobile, which may be damaged in front.

Buddy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Armitage and was a second-grade pupil at St. Mary's Catholic School. Armitage is a welder. The couple have three other children.

D. C. Man Killed When Auto Overturns

Edmond R. Ruedi, jr., about 30, of 4118 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest, was killed at 5:30 p. m. when his car blew a tire and overturned on Ritchie Road near Brown Station Road, Prince Georges County, Md. His body was thrown 25 feet.

Ruedi, a truck driver for a Washington dairy, was returning to Washington from the Marlboro races, police said.

Conductor: Carlo Peroni.

After a day of uncertainty, the weather turned propitious last evening for the final performance of the San Carlo Opera Company at the Potomac Watergate, and several thousand auditors enjoyed the double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." The farewell to the organization was as hearty as the welcome had been, applause was frequent and ovational in quantity, and the week's engagement ended as satisfactory as it began. Considering the difficulties of staging and the unpredictable caprices of amplification, the performances have been a credit to Maestro Carlo Peroni, to the stage director, Louis Raybaut, and to the disciplined company.

BROWN

Anne Roselle and Rolf Gerard were the Santuzza and Turiddu in Mascagni's lyrical version of Giovanni Verga's short story, and their characterizations wore cogent. Miss Roselle sang with an impassioned quality implicit in the warmth of her voice and the intensity of her impersonation. She stirred emotional sympathy with the fervor of her tonal coloring and the verisimilitude of her portrayal. Mr. Gerard put the right amount of bravado and exasperation into his treatment of the village Don Juan, and sang his lines effectively. Stefan Kozakevich brought into sharp focus the part of Alfio, and his vocalism was vibrant and sturdy, while Charlotte Bruno was a requisitely pert Lola.

In the prologue to "Pagliacci," Mostyn Thomas did his best singing of the engagement during which he has reliably filled widely differing roles. The time, the place and the mood coincided, and his reading of the composer's plea that the humanity of the players be recognized had a fine sonorous eloquence. In the role of Tonio he displayed histrionic deftness in the details of a character difficult to delineate.

Two young American singers, Jean Tennyson and Leonard Stokes, who have been heard here in recital, made their first local appearance in opera. Miss Tennyson, while she sang the ballatta with an agreeable facility and assurance, was a rather casual Nedda, as though she did not care greatly for the role. Mr. Stokes diclosed in the small role of Silvio an excellent and admirably trained voice. His diction, his phrasing and his firmness of tone make him a barytone to keep an eye on.

By George W. Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

The little white-haired widow looked at the bank book she held in her hand, at the presents and greeting cars on the bed, then at the faces of her friends, and smiled.

It was her birthday—her seventy-fourth—but one that meant a new lease on life. She was well on her way to a comeback from the misfortune that seemed so insurmountable three weeks ago.

Sunday, August 3, Mrs. Rose Fones lifted the mattress of her bed in a rooming house at 416 Third Street Northwest. That was where she kept her life savings, $1167, she had depended on to tide her over the remainder of her life. It was gone.

Police later arrested a fellow roomer who now awaits trial, but that didn't bring back her savings. There were only a few dollars on the suspect.

Readers of The Post began sending contributions to make up Mrs. Fones' loss. Day by day contributions were received at The Post building, or handed to Mrs. Fones at her home—cash and checks, clothing and food, by anonymous givers as well as by persons who left their names and asked her to call upon them should she again be in need.

"How wonderful this is! . . . I just can't say how grateful I am for what everyone has done," she said. Mrs. Fones said last night when a Post representative handed her a savings account bank book. It showed deposits of $627.40, collections through Wednesday. In the meantime, funds amounting to $24.50 were sent to the newspaper for her, and $9 and a package of food to her home.

Mrs. Fones was particularly touched by one contribution yesterday from a 6-year-old girl, who said she also was celebrating her birthday. It was a "Hhppy Birthday" with a $1 bill enclosed.

Mrs. Fones opened other greeting cards and the presents, handkerchiefs, a dress, jars of fruit, in the room of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Alderson and the half-dozen other friends present. Then she led the way into the dining room where she cut her birthday cake.

Budget Hearings Set for Sept. 15, 16

The Commissioners announced yesterday they would hold public hearings September 15 and 16 on budget estimates for the fiscal year 1943 submitted by the various municipal department heads.

Persons planning to testify at the hearing were urged by the city heads to prepare in writing a digest of their testimony for the files. These digests should be sent to the District Building by September 12, it was announced.

National Dog Week Chairman Appointed

Arthur W. Scharfeld, 3217 Cathedral Avenue, has been appointed Washington chairman for the fourteenth National Dog Week, to be held September 21-27, Richard C. Allen, executive secretary of the National Dog Week Association in Chicago, announced yesterday.

The week is to be observed with parades, humane contests, radio programs and special civic features, Allen said.

District Area Will Benefit by Expenditure Of $2,410,000

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the 200 million dollar naval supply bill which will bring $2,410,000 worth of naval improvements to the Washington area, including expansion of medical and hospital facilities at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., at a total cost of $1,680,000.

At the same time the President signed the Senate bill permitting the Rainbow (Forty-second) Division veterans to erect a suitable memorial in honor of their dead on public grounds in the District.

By the President's signature the Smithsonian Gallery of Art Commission was authorized to purchase a model of the winning design for the proposed new Smithsonian Gallery of Art from the designers, Eliel Saarinen, Eero Saarinen and Robert F. Swanson, at a price not to exceed $2500.

Another bill signed by the President provides that a recipient of aid to the blind in the District shall be buried at the expense of the District board for aid to the blind.

Thief Routed At Sze Home; $25 Missing

Police last night were seeking an intruder who made his escape with a billfold containing $25 after being surprised in the act of looting the Hotel 2400 suite of Dr. Sas-ke Alfred Sze, former Chinese Ambassador to this country, at 2400 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

ALICE SZE

Dr. Sze's 17-year-old daughter, Alice, was alone in the living room of the suite early yesterday morning when she heard a noise in the bedroom. Upon investigating, she discovered a man who had apparently entered by an unlocked summer door, going through the drawers of a bureau. She screamed, and the thief fled out the door and down the corridor.

She gave chase, calling for help to two other residents of the hotel who were in the hallway, Mrs. Chauncey C. Williams and Mrs. Walter A. Adams. The thief made his escape down a fire escape at the end of the corridor.

Dr. Sze, who was out of the room at the time, discovered that his wallet was missing upon his return.

Ambulance, Sent for One, Gets 2 Patients

Arriving at the scene of a traffic accident, the ambulance was also on the spot for a man overcome by carbon monoxide in a basement garage at 4801 Connecticut Avenue.

Winfred S. Hasham, 29, 2332 Eleventh Street Northwest, had his foot crushed when a runaway automobile struck his car while he was changing a tire. The runaway car was parked on Cumberland Street. It rolled down to the intersection and knocked Hasham's car off its jack, crushing Hasham's foot.

No sooner had Hasham been placed in the ambulance than a woman stopped the attendants to tell them of the carbon monoxide case. The victim was Melvin T. McLean, 26, Negro, of 1531 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, who worked on the apartment garage, and was apparently overcome when something went wrong with the ventilating system.

Both men were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Barge Refloored For Ballet Tonight

A new floor was laid on Washington's Watergate barge yesterday in preparation for the season's first performance of the Original Russian Ballet at 8:15 p. m. today.

The amplification system also was checked and repaired for the benefit of the company's 65 dancers, whose first program will include "The Sylphe," "Les Presages" and "The Blue Danube."

Carrasquel's Streak Is Halted by Homer After Eight Innings Of Excellent Hurling

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Aug. 22.—Ouch! Barney McCosky just hit a home run into the upper deck of right field in the ninth inning this afternoon, and the Nats don't have that six-game winning streak any more. The Tigers blackjacked 'em with five runs in the ninth to win a 5-4 game.

Alex Carrasquel's private winning streak of six games also went down in the crash of McCosky's homer. The big Venezuelan botched it for himself after going into the ninth with a 4-0 lead which he messed up completely. The Tigers, held to five hits by Carrasquel in the first eight innings, packed five hits into the ninth to get the victory.

Deuces Are Wild

McCosky's homer was a last-ditch affair. Two were on base, two were out, and the Tigers were two runs behind when McCosky parked the ball in the upper deck. Deuces were wild, in fact; it was McCosky's second home run of the season. It happened on the second pitch. And that's how the Nats finished—second. On second thought, maybe we'd better reconstruct that ninth.

The Tigers were scoreless for eight innings and going into the ninth there was reason to believe that Carrasquel would remain the only unbeaten pitcher in the big league this year. He was apparently breezing, and then things began to happen.

The first thing that happened was a single to right by Billy Sullivan, and the next thing that happened was a single to right by Birdie Tebbetts, hitting for Frank Croucher. Schoolboy Rowe hit into a force play at second for the first time out, and Bruce Campbell, pinch-hitting for Stanbach, singled to right to get a run home. Gehringer flied deep to Case and Rowe scored from third with the second run.

Bang! It's All Over!

But there were now two out and the tying run was yet on base, so there was no great panic on the Washington bench. But there was when Radcliff singled to center and Manager Bucky Harris looked in the direction of the bullpen. He apparently didn't like what he saw there (Bill Zuber and Walter Masterson) and he left Carrasquel in the box.

Whereupon McCoskey liked what he saw on the second pitch and deposited three runs across the plate. The Nats did not carry Carasquel off the field on their shoulders.

Schoolboy Rowe was the winning pitcher. He relieved Dizzy Trout

Brooklyn Routs Hurler Erickson In First 2 Innings To Preserve Lead

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 22.—A five-run lead picked up by the Dodgers in the first two innings at the expense of Paul Erickson carried them to an 8-to-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs today and enabled them to preserve their game-and-a-half lead over the St. Louis Cardinals in the torrid National League race.

Newt Kimball, who started for the Dodgers, went to pieces in the seventh inning and was ganged for three runs by the Cubs before Hugh Casey could be rushed into the breach.

Casey retired the side by forcing Clyde McCullough to ground out to first. Bill Nicholson gave the Cubs their last run in the ninth when he banged his twenty-second home run of the season with the bases empty. It was Casey's fifth relief appearance in as many days.

Tot Pressnell, who followed Erickson on the mound for the Bruins, was struck on his left forearm by a liner off Dixie Walker's bat in the sixth and was painfully injured. He was taken to a hospital for an X-ray examination.

The top of the Dodger's batting order had a field day. Dixie Walker, lead-off man, rapped three singles and scored four runs; Pete Reiser hit three singles and Billy Herman contributed a double and a single that drove across two scores. Pee Wee Reese slammed a triple.

Cards Defeat Phils, 4 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Herman Triplett's inside-the-park home run with a man on base gave St. Louis a 4-2 victory over the Phillies today in a 10-inning battle.

The Cardinals lost the services of Johnny Hopp, star outfielder, for an indefinite time when Bobby Bragan stepped on his left hand in the fourth inning during a second-base play. X-ray pictures will be taken to determine the extent of the injury.

St. Louis tied, 2-2, in the fourth. Hopp singled and Johnny Mize was safe on Danny Murtaugh's error. Don Padgett singled, scorping Hopp, and the bases were loaded when Marion walked. Mancuso singled, scoring Mize.

Whirlaway Loafs on Day Before Big Race

Whirlaway, which will seek to clinch the 3-year-old championship with a victory in the $40,000 added American Derby at Washington Park today, was anything but tense as, wearing white "earmuffs," he grazed near the track stables yesterday. Yankees Drop Another Game To Tribe, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—The Yankees lost their third straight game and the fourth in five starts in the West today when the Indians clung to an early lead and beat them, 5 to 4, behind Jim Bagby's eight-hit pitching.

Marvin Breuer hurled the first six innings for the Yanks and was bombarded for all the Indians' runs. Roy Weatherly leading the assault with a double and two singles. Ken Keltner contributed three singles. Norman Branch held the locals hitless for the last two frames.

The Yanks, still missing the services of Joe DiMaggio, had difficulty bunching their blows off Bagby. They gave Jim some uneasy moDickey singled across a pair of runs, but he bore down on Joe Joe Gordon to halt the rally and

Whirlaway, at 1 to 10 Odds, Faces 4 Racers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Whirlaway has a chance tomorrow to take the sting out of his greatest failure—his flop in the Arlington Classic a month ago.

The uncrowned 3-year-old champion will go to the post in the $40,000 added American Derby at Washington Park probably at odds of 1 to 10, and only a dazzling upset could prevent a victory over as cheap a field as has contested one of the sport's oldest feature races.

Probably no more than four horses will oppose Whirlaway, although six were named tonight to start. The four which probably will face the "cannon-ball" are Walmac Farm's Bushwhacker, David Strauss' Daily Trouble, John Marsch's To-a-Tee, and Clarence Davidson's Delray. The doubtful starters are Valdina Dude and Happy Pilot.

Although he finished second to Attention in the Arlington Classic upset, Whirlaway managed to beat Bushwhacker by six lengths, Daily Trouble by nine and a half, and To-a-Tee by fourteen and a half.

Bushwacker May Figure

Bushwhacker is the only horse in the field which figures, in opinion of experts, to give Whirlaway any kind of competition. He is trained by Howard Wells, Lexington, Ky., rated as one of the shrewdest in the sport. Wells figures this is the season of the year when some of the 3-year-olds of early promise have begun to wilt, and those with sturdier qualities are showing real merit. He maintains Bushwhacker is up to the point of running a mile and a quarter at blazing speed and the distance won't bother him.

Trainer Ben Jones of Whirlaway arrived from Saratoga Springs to

Furnace Salesman Wins Top U. S. Trapshooting Honors

By the Associated Press

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 22.—In the most "nervous" shoot-off in Grand American Handicap history, Walter L. Tulbert, 52-year-old Detroit, Mich., furnace salesman, won trapshooting's blue ribbon event today by beating Del Bundschuh, 28-year-old Fremont, Ohio, machinist, 23 to 22.

The two unknowns tied at 99 of 100 to beat a field of 1083, second largest in the 42-year history of the "roaring grand," and each had a grand case of "jitters" when called out in front of a gallery of about 10,000 for the deciding extra-target event.

Tulburt appeared out of the running as he missed the fifth and sixth targets to go two down, but he went straight the rest of the way to take the title as Bundschuh muffed the twelfth, fourteenth and nineteenth clays.

In keeping with grand American tradition, the two who tied for the title had never before won anything anywhere. Tulburt has been shooting traps for only a bit over a month, being a skeet shooter by choice, while Bundschuh has been at it for four years with absolutely no success.

The two "sharpshooters for a day" split the $1000 first and $500 second prizes, and with various purses and optionals wound up about $1500 each ahead of the day's firing.

Miss W. Marie Hill, 29-year-old Kansas City star who learned to shoot a couple of years ago so she could shoot quail for her father who has failing eyesight, won the feminine championship with 96 of 100, followed by Mrs. P. J. Herold, of San Francisco, with 95, and Mrs. Isaac Andrews, of Spartanburg, S. C., with 93. The profesional title went to H. F. Ehler of San Antonio, Tex.

J. Marcey (20), 83.
J. Pearce (20), 87.
Virginia J. Hall, Alexandria (22), 87.
Al Schuttle, Petersburg (22), 81.

1-Man Stand Is Futile At Longwood

Novice Partner No Help as Parker, McNeill Score, 6-4, 6-0, 4-6, 3-6 and 6-2

By the Associated Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 22.—Frank Kovacs, towering Oakland, Calif., netman, was a one-man team in the sixtieth National Doubles Championships today but fell short of the miracle needed for an upset.

As a result, semifinal ranks in the men's division were filled by two more seeded teams to continue the formful advance at Longwood Cricket Club.

Kovacs, playing with inexperienced Will Crosby, a home-town pal, treated the gallery to a fine individual exhibition only to lose to the seeded tandem of National Singles Champion Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Frank Parker, of Altadena, Calif., 6—4, 6—0, 4—6, 3—6, 6—2.

Grant, Bobbitt Bow

Fourth-seeded Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., were other favorites who remained in the running. They conquered Bitsy Grant and Russell Bobbitt, Atlanta, Ga., 2—6, 7—5, 7—5, 6—3.

One pair of finalists in the women's division was determined when Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of New York, and Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, swamped the teen-aged California surprises, Shirley Catton, of Alameda, and Pearl Harland, of Santa Monica, 6—3, 6—2.

The free-swinging Kovacs, blasting drives from all positions, staged a single-handed rally to dominate the third and fourth sets and pull his partner to a tie with the Nation's first and fifth ranking players.

So potent were his forehand and backhand smashes that they twisted the racquets of McNeill and Parker, forcing them to net or commit other errors. He cruised the court to make seemingly impossible gets, and it appeared he might pull the

IT SEEMS MR. SARAZEN WAS WRONG

Detroit, Aug. 22.—Gene Sarazen, who once authored an article entitled "Pro Golf, the Sucker's Game," now sheepishly admits he might have been wrong. The golf pros are doing very well for themselves these days and before the year is finished they will cut up $200,000 in tournament money.

POVICH

"The point I was making a few years ago," Sarazen was saying today, "was that of all the professional athletes the golf pros were the biggest chumps. We'd traipse around the country playing for dinky purses, paying our own expenses and generally being very sappy. It was 1 to 10 we wouldn't break even on our tours. Yet we all went for the tournament circuit. It was a bad gamble we were making on ourselves."

Sarazen, who is here with Bobby Jones and assorted other pros to challenge Walter Hagen's Ryder Cup team in a charity match tomorrow and Sunday, makes a deep bow of gratitude to Freddy Corcoran, manager of the P. G. A. tournament bureau. The Boston-born Corcoran, a former caddy who grew up in the game, is the gent who has made the professional golf business worth while for the pros. "Today we're averaging one open tournament a week," he points out, "and few of 'em carry less than $5,000 prize money."

Making It Easier for Fans

The pros, it seems, are getting smarter about their exhibitions. They're making it easier on the spectators. They aren't asking their customers to follow the matches in long, bedraggled parades from hole to hole. They're building bleachers for the fans around the greens and thus dispensing with the dog-fights for points of vantage among the galleries.

"We've learned one thing," says Corcoran. "Golf fans don't go for that long game like they did. Long hitters are getting too commonplace. Mostly, they want to see these pros putt. They get more belt out of a pro dropping a 30-footer than they do out of seeing one of our big guys knock a ball 300 yards. The fellows who draw the biggest galleries these days are Horton Smith and Vic Ghezzi and Paul Runyon who can can those balls on the green. The fans love to see 'em drop.

"That hauling and shoving among the galleries went out when Bobby Jones retired. He was a stand-out, and everybody wanted to see him play every shot, and he'd take crowds as high as 10,000 around the course with him. I didn't blame 'em, because they wanted to see the best. But if they follow any one twosome or foursome in our tournaments now, they're 10 to 1 to miss the best shots. There are too many good golf players these days. No one man can command the gallery."

The chief trouble with pro golf is that there are no good amateurs to give the pros competition and revive the old pro vs. amateur suspense that helped to make golf a big league sport, says Corcoran. "In the days when Jones and Von Elm and Chick Evans were around, there was always a good chance that they'd knock off the best pros in the National Open or other big tournaments, but that's passe. The pros have it too much to themselves.

Lawson Little Last Good Amateur

"The first good amateur who can come along and give the pros a battle of it is going to be a tremendous hero to the gallery. But there isn't any around. The good amateurs go into the open tournaments now with an inferiority complex, and you can't blame 'em. They're not good enough, and they know it. There was one man who, if he had not turned pro, might have been a bigger figure than any of our pros. That was Lawson Little, who could have given any pro a battle when he was an amateur. But he had to make a living, and he joined up with us."

At least ten pros will earn $6000 or more in prize money this year, says Corcoran. Ben Hogan has already earned $15,000 and there will be few who can moan about not paying their expenses with their prize money. That dough is separate and apart, of course, from their salaries from club affiliations.

Nineteen years after he won his first open title, Sarazen is still the most glamorous of the pro golf figures, as drawing-cards are rated. The handsome little Italian fellow who bounced back from semi-obscurity in 1935 to win the Masters Tournament at Augusta, has a knack of commanding the headlines. Indeed he is the wisest publicist among all the pro golfers. We do not speak of his sensational double eagle two that helped him to win the Masters Tournament, nor his come-back in the last two National Opens. Sarazen knows how to keep his name in print otherwise.

Dressed Down Golfers Who Overdressed

In any newspaper library the Sarazen clippings are bulky. The diminutive fellow delights in lending his name to a controversy, if he doesn't start it himself. He got reams of space in 1935 when he refused to play in the Agua Caliente Open because pari-mutuel betting on the golfers was conducted. He toured the United States in 1933 in a dazzling trailer contraption that included everything but hot and cold running floor shows. He made a hole in one by searchlight. He got himself insured for $100,000 by the club he represented. He gave hell to golfers who overdressed and said they should forget their swanky clothes and give more time to learning to play the game. He startled the golf world by proposing eight-inch cups. Anything to keep his name out in front.

That two on the fifteenth hole at Augusta in 1935 produced screaming headlines for Sarazen. From 240 yards away, he slugged a spoon shot into the cup to enable him to tie Craig Wood on the final round before winning the playoff. But was that the thrill shot of Sarazen's career? It was not. He tells you about that one.

"The shot that gave me the biggest thrill of my life was the putt I sank for a birdie on the last hole at Agua Caliente in 1932. I needed it to win that $10,000 open. That was the day my brokers called me from New York during the morning and told me I needed $10,000 more margin or I was sunk. I didn't know where it was coming from until I sank that thrill putt."

Sportin' Around

New York, Aug. 22.—The decision in the Marva Louis vs. Pal Joey litigation represents Joe's first draw . . . Funny how some fourth rate ball clubs get a "hex" on good teams and run them ragged. The lowly Browns, for instance, have been an almost insurmountable obstacle in the way of the Red Sox this year . . . Jack Sutherland is worried about Ace Parker's mending right ankle. It wasn't broken as badly as the left was last year, but the right is Ace's kicking foot, the foot he braces himself on for his passes and the foot on which he pivots on runs . . . Sammy Renick has gotten a lot of other jockeys interested in tennis, as a means of keeping down weight . . . Whirlaway can go over tomorrow by winning the $40,000 American Derby.

CONSIDINE

Arch McDonald, crack baseball announcer, found himself marooned in the corner of a room full of too-too horsey set bores at a party not long ago. The jodhpur-equipped hostess questioned him at some length on his own interest in horses, but found him completely unresponsive. Finally she asked: "Do you hunt?"

Arch brightened. "Yes, I enjoy shooting," he said.

The hostess sighed with pleasure. She had found a common ground for conversation. "And what do you enjoy shooting?" she beamed.

A's Dive for the Cellar

The father of Ray Robinson, next lightweight champion, ran away from the Robinson menage when Ray was 14, and hasn't been heard from since. Robinson supported his mother and two sisters by shining shoes, and decided to be a fighter because Joe Louis was his idol . . . As if there weren't enough competition for last place in the American League, what with the Brown and Senators locked in a wondrous duel for the cellar, along comes the Athletics with new theories of incompetence which may gain them the coveted spot . . . Seems that the few American hockey players there are have been hit harder by our draft than has the raft of Canadian players by the Canadian draft . . . Hockey is expanding, by the way: Washington, with Ching Johnson in charge, will enter the American League to boost the league total to ten; Dallas and Fort Worth will up the American Association to eight clubs and Johnstown, Pa., is enlarging the Eastern league to seven.

Fag writes in to suggest that good-looking Frank McCormick, of the Reds, be given the part of Lou Gehrig in the movie about the late great first baseman. Frank's right-handed, but at that he'd probably be a lot better than some of the actors reported in line for the role. Gary Cooper, who'll probably get the part, never played baseball, in fact never saw a full game until Actor Pat Flaherty took him to see Hollywood play before Cooper went to work on "John Doe." Police and Firemen's Field Day Will Attract 15,000 Today

Softball Game Opens Card At Stadium

50, 75-Yard Dashes, Other Track Events To Feature Benefit; Agnew Is Chairman

A bigger and better show than ever before has been planned for the Police and Firemen's annual benefit Field Day, starting a seven-hour stand at Griffith Stadium at 11 a. m. this morning. Upward of 15,000 spectators are expected to attend the event, which will benefit the Police Retiring Association and the Firemen's Relief and Retiring Fund.

Launching the program will be a softball game between members of the metropolitan services, with the firefighters as defending champions. The teams will be under the management of Officer Herb Jewell and Fireman George Burdine.

At 1 p. m. the main program opens with the singing of "The Star-Spangle Banner." In attendance are expected to be such luminaries as Commissioners Guy Mason, John Russell Young and Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz; Inspectors Arthur Miller, Maurice Collins and J. F. Beckett, of the Metropolitan Police; Deputy Chief A. C. Buschert, Superintendent of Machines O. E. Ferin, Battalion Chief L. W. Wollardo and Battalion Chief John Werheim, of the D. C. Fire Department.

Agnew Is Chairman

General chairman of entertainment will be Lieut. John Agnew, Jimmy Lake will act as master of ceremonies, and Coach Rolland Lund, of Anacostia High School, will be in charge of track events.

These latter will include dashes of 50 and 75 yards, running broad jump, the shotput, a novelty race, a shoe race and tug-of-war. Special races for older men will be staged with police entries far outnumbering those from the Fire Department.

On the spectacular side of the list will be, among other items, a comedy boxing match between two clowns, Frank Portillo and "Bumpsy" Anthony; a demonstration of the use of pyrene and C. O. Two in the fighting of fires, Billy Gee and his whip-cracking act, Fred Fetter's Clown Band, and a demonstration on a 65-foot tower by the firemen's drill team headed by Chief Clement Murphy and Capt. Herald Harding. The Traffic Division's motorcycle stunt team will again perform, and bands from the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and National Training School will furnish the musical background.

'Unwanted' Dusky Fox Tops Sales

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 22. Thirty-four unwanted race horses sold for prices ranging from $50 to $2300 at the annual auction of horses in training at the George E. Street sales paddock tonight.

One of the largest crowds of the season turned out for the sale of surplus stock, some of which came from such famous racing establishments as George E. Widener's Stable, the Wheatley Stable, W. H. La Boyteaux, B. N. Kane, the Sanford Stud Farm and the Manhasset Stable.

Dusky Fox, sold by William Woodward's Bel Air Stud, brought the top price of $2300. This son of Gallant Fox—Imp Brown Betty II was sold to Nat Ray. The next highest bid was $1800, paid by J. T. Maloney for Imp. Resolute II, which has won this season.

Trainer Eddie Coates acquired Object Lesson for $50.

What's This? It Should Only Happen to Marx Bros.

No, pal, these aren't shots from the latest comedy to come out of Hollywood—just the boys from the Varsity Variety Club out-Marxing the Marx Bros. at the gang's outing at Manor Country Club yesterday. Left—You're wrong again—it's not one of those snakes you hear about on the nineteenth hole—only Al Miller, Dave Legum and Ned Bord, three serious members, playing a slightly complicated shot from a trap. Below—Col. Ed Halsey, secretary of the Senate, attempts a bit of William Tell golf from the noble brow of Carter Barron. Eddie Meinike, tournament chairman, prays that all goes well. Al Pratt won the tournament with a low gross of 72. Ned Bord took low net with 86x24, 62. L. E. Harris won driving contest with a 275-yard shot. George Werner finished first in the ace competition, five feet from pin

Channing Scores Over Hall in Net Tourney

Margot Lee Mahony, Mrs. Wilmer Allison Move Into Women's Doubles Finals

Bob Hall, an underdog in pre-match figuring, bowed to Charley Channing in the quarter-finals of the District Recreation Department's men's singles on the Reservoir Courts yesterday, but not until he had turned back his more experienced rival, 9—7, in the first set, and had a substantial lead of 5—2, 30-love in the final set.

In the semifinals of the women's doubles, Margot Lee Mahony and Mrs. Wilmer Allison moved into the finals by defeating Mrs. Theodore Hackett and Sara Moore, 6—1, 1—6, 6—1. Their opponents in today's finals, beginning at 3:30, will be Dorette Miller and Ena Dellinger, who yesterday downed Maria Vierra and Miss Wassman, 6—0, 6—3.

In the men's singles Channing, who took the second set, 6—4, recovered that steady form in the third set and as Hall pressed a bit too hard, Channing took advantage of errors to win, 7—5.

Also in the quarter-finals, Don Leavens surprised no one by defeating Austin Rice, 6—1, 6—1, and Bobby Bensinger downed Rickey Willis, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Yesterday's results:

Men's singles, quarter-finals—Channing defeated Hall, 7—9, 6—4, 7—5; Leavens defeated Rice, 6—1, 6—1; Bensinger defeated Willis, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Skins' Hoffman Is Deferred From Service

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 22—Bob Hoffman, a blocking back on whom Coach Ray Flaherty is counting in his plans for this year's Redskins, has been given a deferred status by his draft board. The former Southern California halfback, who will be playing his second season with the Washington pros, returned today from Los Angeles in time to take part in the afternoon drill and said that he would not be called for army service before December 17. This would allow him to be in the play-off if the Redskins make that grade.

The Redskins will hold their first scrimmage of the training season tomorrow. Flaherty said that blocking pads would be used but that the men would not bear down for the first time. This session will mark the first real test for Andy Farkas right leg. He expects to let loose tomorrow and he should know at the close of the drill if the leg will stand the grind.

Farkas was injured at Spokane last year and played only a few minutes. In addition to scrimmage, the first place-kicking drill will be staged. Joe Aguirre, a keen contender for an end position, will be among those tried. He defeated Fordham for St. Mary's last year with a 39-yard placement.

Truck Tornell is another to be given a chance. Coach Flaherty said that he is pleased with the condition and the pep of the squad. He said that both rookies and veterans had caught on to plays quickly.

Georgie Pace Wins Over Danny London

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Georgie Pace, 127¾, Cleveland, former bantamweight champion, gained an easy eight-round decision over Danny London, 127½, New York, in the feature bout at the Coney Island Velodrome tonight.

Pace cut London's left eye in the second round and floored him for no count in the eighth, but he was unable to connect with a knockout wallop in a final flurry of punching.

His marriage to Miss Jones will end a courtship which started in high school here at Roosevelt, where Robertson was a basketball and baseball star.

Post's Grid School Winds Up Week of Strenuous Practice

Football Students Given Two-Day Rest; Sessions Scheduled Next Week at Eastern

Students at The Washington Post's football school wound up their first week of action yesterday at Eastern High Stadium, and despite their evident enjoyment of every class they expressed pleasure at the prospect of two days of rest.

Every session to date has been a strenuous one, especially for those of the approximately 100 whose program throughout the summer has lacked heavy work. Yet classes have remained about the same size each of the 5 days, indicating an honest desire on the part of all concerned to get in the best of condition before their regular high school training begins.

Capped by a two-hour session—4 to 6 p. m.—yesterday in the fundamentals of downfield blocking along with brief drills in kicking, passing and defense, The Post schol so far has attempted to ground its students in each of the following: Stance, charging, blocking, and tackling. And the superfluous fat has fairly rolled off in the process.

With another five-day stand starting Monday, at the end of which time prizes will be given for excellence in various aspects of football, Post school students look forward to an interesting time. "Guest" coaches will assist regular coaches Sam Fox, Jim O'Leary and Les Ehrlich each day.

The first will be Phil Fox, former Central star, on Monday. Phil was himself a student at the West Virginia University football school this summer which was presided over by Fritz Crisler, Michigan University coach. He will lecture on training methods, also demonstrate various systems—Notre Dame, Warner, etc. He will be followed on successive days by Hardy Pearce, former Central High coach; Orrel Mitchell, Georgetown Prep mentor, and others.

Meanwhile, another out-of-town grid teacher yesterday displayed interest in The Post's school. B. V. Aylor, of the Madison (Va.) High School, in a letter to Sam Fox, praised the affair at Eastern Stadium and asked young Fox's opinion on several points about football. Yet another fan wrote in, signing himself "A Friend," and objected to one lesson youngsters have been taught. He failed to support his argument, however.

Women Enter Closed Golf Finals Today

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Russell Mann, of Omaha, Nebr., who won the championship in 1933, and Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., emerged tonight as finalists in the forty-first Women's Western Closed Golf Championship and will battle over 36 holes tomorrow for the title.

The veteran, Mrs. Mann, had little difficulty today in defeating her long-time rival, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 5 and 3, but the other semifinal was not settled until the nineteenth hole when Miss Wall pulled victory out of the fire.

The Menominee girl was 6 down to Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., at the turn, but here Miss Tainter blew up and the battle was all even at the fifteenth. Miss Wall took the lead at the seventeenth, but lost her opportunity by driving into trap at the eighteenth and then missing the green.

A's Avoid Cellar, Defeat Browns, 5-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—The Philadelphia Athletics, who were fourth on August 8, barely averted the American League cellar today by nosing out the eighth-place Browns, 5 to 4.

The Browns chipped in with five errors, helping the A's to an unearned and, as it turned out, important run.

Dick Siebert's double, driving in two runs, and the unearned tally were offset by the Browns with a run in the first inning and two more in the fourth when Phil Marchildon donated three bases on balls.

Frankie Hayes' homer and Pinch Hitter Dee Miles' single after two passes in the seventh gave the A's enough to ignore Harlond Clift's subsequent home run.

Bobby Jones Back in Golf Wars Today

By International News Service

Detroit, Aug. 22.—"You can't tell, I might shoot a pretty good game tomorrow," said Bobby Jones tonight after he batted a golf ball around the course in preparation for the challenge match tomorrow with the Ryder Cup team at the Detroit Golf Club.

Jones, the greatest golfer of all time, will captain the challengers and Walter Hagen will be the non-playing captain of the Ryder outfit. All proceeds of the two-day battle between some of the most brilliant stars of golfdom will go to the United Service Organizations.

The first day's matches get under way at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Jones and Gene Sarazen will tee off at 10 a. m. against the Ryder Cup duo of Byron Nelson and Harold McSpaden in the day's Scotch foursome. Sunday's matches will be twosomes.

Among the hyder shot makers, besides Nelson and McSpaden, are Vic Ghezzi, National P. G. A. champion; Jimmy Hines, Sam Snead, Ralph Guldahl, Henry Picard, Dick Metz, Paul Runyan and Horton Smith.

Jones, who has played lititle competitive golf since his retirement, thought he still might be good enough to contribute something to the efforts of his team.

Naval Air Wins Over Center Market

After being held to a 4-4 tie by Center Market Thursday, Naval Air Station nine settled the immediate issue between the teams conclusively yesterday, ringing up a 4-1 victory to move up a notch in the city sandlot baseball championship tournament. A large and enthusiastic gathering watched the bitter seven-inning battle on the Ellipse.

The winners, titlists in the United States Government League, thus joined The Washington Post-Industrial League champ, Heurich, in the favorite roles. Today's clash, on the East Ellipse at 4:30 brings together once-beaten Veterans' Administration, and St. Elizabeths, crown-bearer from the Federal-Commercial League.

"Lefty" Smith, rotund N. A. S. pitcher, got credit for yesterday's victory, though his four-hit effort was matched by Market's Joe Wells. Smith turned in nine strikeouts, however, to Wells' one, and walked only three to Wells' five.

Score in Second

N. A. S. filled the bases in the first frame, but couldn't get its first run home until the second. Then a pair of errors and a walk turned the trick without a hit being recorded. It wasn't until the fourth inning that either team hit safely, and then Outfielder Cunningham, who registered two of the Market's hits, was responsible. He was left on base, however.

The fifth inning was the Air Station's most important one. Center Fielder Sheppard led off with a double and First Baseman Dunn followed with a triple. All the Airmen needed for their second run of the inning was a long fly by Korab.

Manhattan Tops Kavakos In Upset, 1-0

Kavakos Grill's powerful ten suffered an unexpected setback as the District of Columbia Softball Federation championship tournament was continued last night at Ballston Stadium, dropping a 1-0 decision to Manhattan Auto and Radio after a torrid battle.

In the other game of a twin bill, World War Division, of the War Department League, smashed the Audit ten of the General Accounting office, 14-1, behind the four-hit pitching of Korane.

Kavakos' upset was mainly due to the one-hit mound performance of Oren Shanks and Johnny Cinotti's single in the fourth inning. Cinotti's blow came on the heels of First Baseman George's triple. "Cannon Ball" Smith was touched for four hits by Manhattan.

Tonight's schedule, to be undergone at Washington Softball Stadium, will find I. B. M., the defending champion, facing Lansburgh's at 9 p. m., and N. E. Commercial tangling with War Department Auditors at 8 p. m.

Tom Harmon Has Date With Halas For Football Talk

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Tom Harmon, Michigan's great all-America halfback, who has intimated—but never said definitely—that he would not play professional football disclosed today that he has a date with George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, next week.

Halas acquired first rights to negotiate with Harmon in the National Professional Football League "draft," but the two have never met to talk it over.

Harmon said that a football broadcasting contract he has with a Detroit radio station would not interfere if he decided to join up with the "play for pay" forces.

Marandan, Paying $11.10, Wins Feature Race at Marlboro

High Bud Beaten Out By Length

Flag Etta Takes Down Show Spoils; Root Keeps Victor On Straight, Narrow

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 22.—With some 5000 fans cheering her on, Everett Brining's Marandan, after running out in her recent starts, stayed in at all turns today to take down top money in the fifth and outstanding event. The 4-year-old filly was a different horse today as she led nearly all the way to report a length in front of the highly fancied High Bud. Flag Etta, at one time considered a threat to the filly championship of the smaller circuits, could do no better than third in the limit field.

With Buddy Root showing his best form, the daughter of Brandon Mint moved to the front soon after the start and after disposing of Lulu Khayyam, opened a daylight lead. High Bud, meanwhile, was just coasting in behind the leader. On the final bend Dufford, on High Bud, called on his mount and he started moving to the leader. Flag Etta at this stage had begun moving up on the rail. However, Marandan still had plenty left and held her advantage to the wire. High Bud held on well in the stretch run and drew away from Flag Etta, who had flattened out when the real running started.

Marandan Pays $11.10

Marandan, which was responsible for Willie Kelly being suspended at Cumberland, ran the fastest six and one half furlongs of the meeting and hung up the time of 1:25 3/5. She was slightly neglected in the wagering and returned the good price of $11.10.

Mrs. E. Valenti's Great Sarah was a paddock tip in the opening event of six and one-half furlongs and she made good after being backed down to 4-1.

With Sammy Palumbo doing the shooting, Noon Step traveled the six and a half furlong second event in the good time of 1:26 4-5 and rewarded his backers $6 for their confidence.

Those fans wagering on the twin combination of Great Sarah and Noon Step were paid $46.30 by the double cashiers.

Shortly after the running of the third race, it was announced that Knollwood Stables' Good Grass, which was cut down while racing as a favorite, was destroyed.

Lanning Holds Giants, Bucs Win Out, 5 to 3

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 22.—The Pittsburgh Pirates defeated New York, 5 to 3, as Johnny Lanning bested Bob Bowman in a mound duel today when the Bucs tallied three runs in the eighth inning.

Both hurlers went the distance, and each was touched for seven safeties.

Bowman fanned five, but set the stage for his downfall by walking Lanning to begin the rally. Garms' double and Vaughan's fly went Lanning home with the tying tally. Garms dented the rubber on Elliott's fly, and Maurice Van Robays put the finishing touch to the Pirates' attack with a home run.

The Pirates scored their other pair of crossings on Vince DiMaggio's 15th homer of the season, Lanning's double, an infield out and Vaughan's two-bagger.

All the Giants runs came in the fifth on Danning's walk, singles by Jurges and Whitehead, Van Robays' error and Bartell's single.

Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al:

Have you noticed the riders whipping and hustling here during the first three days? If you have, its because they know they must be leveling at all times. Stewards Herman P. Conklin, John P. Turner and William G. Brooks laid the law down to them before the meeting opened and have been watching the riders' every move. Fourth steward in the stand is James T. Wolfe, who represents the Maryland Racing Commission. Wagering for the first two days of the meeting was $310,846, which shows an increase of $97,569 over last year. Once again the Marlboro family is planning on a new road out of the track. They have been planning it for several years. Its a shame that they have gotten no further than planning because they really need a new exit. With the other improvements they are making its a wonder they haven't already fixed the roads. It would put them in solid with the public. During the first two days there were 13 different riders astride winners here. Those having a double to their credit are Willie Dufford, Carson Kirk and George Acosta. The only trainer saddling two winners at the meeting is Tom Lewis. One of the winners was Purport and the other was Yankee Lad, belonging to our old friend Galt Davis. Davis, by the way, was on hand to see his charge score here Thursday. In the first 16 races run here five favorites returned victorious. Race Secretary Eddie Brennan is confident that last year's percentage of winning favorites will be topped this season. However, that is not saying a whole lot as last year's record was only 27 per cent. Jim Mason, of the Charles Town Masons, was here on business for the Jockey Guild. Mason, who represents the guild in this sector, stated that there would be a race run next

Definite Quota Welcomed by Auto Makers

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Aug. 22.—While the effects of yesterday's orders for an immediate 26.5 per cent curtailment in passenger production will not be noticeable until well into November, the announcement of definite production quotas for the first four months of the new model year was welcomed throughout the manufacturing division of the industry.

The car manufacturers pointed out that the fixing of individual quotas will enable the various producers to make plans for the period covered by the allocation order not only in the processing of materials on hand, but also in fixing work schedules and in preparing to carry out an earlier edict for the elimination of all non-functional brightwork on the new models.

Above Expectations

The automobile producers generally had expected an aggregate output allocation of 800,000 cars during the first four months. Thus the decision to permit production of 817,000 passenger vehicles along with a sharp stepping up of truck assemblies brought no disappointment. Many plans related to production, however, had to await the determination of definite and individual company quotas.

Announcement that ultimate curtailment for the 1942 model period may cut passenger car output to approximately 2,150,000 vehicles or 50 percent under the 1941 model year total also was not expected. There are many among the car makers and trade experts who regard expectations of an eventual 50 per cent curtailment as an optimistic view of the outlook.

Employment to Drop

In discussions that already have taken place consideration was given to the effects upon employment and the Nation's motor transport requirements of a curtailment of as much as 75 per cent as well as a complete, if temporary, cessation of all passenger car output later in the model year.

Until such time as the defense industries can absorb them, from 90,000 to 200,000 automobile factory workers will be made idle by the production curtailment, according to labor leaders.

These leaders intimated that in factories that have been working 44 to 48 hours a week during the recent heavy production months, a spreading of work may be achieved by reducing weekly working average to 32 hours. With a prospective production curtailment that will become progressively deeper after November schedules have been filled, however, most labor union heads expect the work spreading program to be only partially successful.

Engineering Awards Off 12% in Week

New York, Aug. 22.—(AP).—Engineering construction awards declined this week to $80,161,000, a drop of 12 per cent from the previous week and 3 per cent less than the same week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

A tapering off in federal awards was largely responsible for the declines. Private work was 9 per cent greater than the week before although 5 per cent less than the same week last year.

Business Highlights

(By Standard & Poor's Corp.)

Civilian Steel Use

The August 9 order placing steel under full priorities rings the death knell, for the time being at least, for steel users not connected directly or indirectly with defense work. It is estimated in some quarters that a total of not more than 2,000,000 tons of steel will be available for civilian use over the closing four months of 1941. Since finished steel production currently averages about 5,000,000 tons per month, this would suggest that defense work will take up around 90 per cent of all the steel to be made, providing the present rate of raw steel output is maintained. If the latter is reduced by a shortage of scrap and pig iron, and some quarters foresee ingot production this fall dropping to around 90 per cent of capacity for that reason, there apparently would be virtually no steel available for shipment to civilian users.

Retail Trade

The figures on retail trade for the recent past suggest that a huge speculative buying wave by the consuming public is under way. For example, the index of department store sales jumped from 104 (revised) in June, to a preliminary figure of 113 for July. For this series such an increase in any one month borders on the spectacular. The figure for July represents a gain of 23 per cent over that for the like month last year. There is no reason to believe that the demand for goods has been anywhere near sated. Not only is mass purchasing power at a record high, and likely to advance still further, but the next few months will witness a substantial contraction in the available supply of consumers' goods. This prospect alone will encourage the public to anticipate its future needs as much as possible.

Metal Fabricators

New business booked by metal fabricators continues to exceed capacity to deliver. Unfilled orders held by copper and brass mills reached a new high in May, 1941, almost triple the level a year earlier, and were only nominally lower on June 30. Since defense expenditures are to be increased enormously, further increases in demand are indicated. Copper and brass mill fabricators delivered 786,800 tons of products during the first half of 1941, as measured by copper content. This was the best first half on record and represented a gain of 85.9 per cent over the like period of 1940. Maintenance of this rate of gain appears improbable, despite expansion in brass rolling mill and copper tubing plant capacities, and a 45 per cent gain in the second half is considered a reasonable expectation.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Cotton futures today extended the recent performance of one day up and the next day down. Final prices were up 6 to 11 points, but earlier the list had shown gains of 14 to 16 points.

The drop from the high levels was attributed partly to bearish sentiment generated by criticism by the head of the American Farm Bureau Federation of the cotton-wheat freezing bill.

Selling pressure was kept within bounds by further reports of weevil infestation in Southeastern areas and forecasts of unfavorable weather over the entire belt.

Dried Egg Output To Be Stepped Up For British Aid

By the Associated Press

A proposed increase in American dried egg production from the present level of about 12,000,000 pounds annually to a capacity "well in excess of 100,000,000 pounds," was announced yesterday by defense officials.

The Office oo Production Management said that the program was necessary to meet British requirements under the lend-lease program of about 100,000,000 pounds of dried eggs a year. American requirements, including needs o the Army and Navy, are estimated at about 14,000,000 pounds for the next 12 months.

struction of between 35 and 40 new

Dried eggs represent a concentrated form of food and are in great demand for shipment to England, it was said.

Grocery Sales Drop Is Less Than Seasonal

The board was set up in the 1940 transportation act for a period of two years, with the provision the President might continue its life for two additional years.

Webb automatically resigned as chairman of the Kentucky Railroad Commission and Smith as chairman of the New Hampshire Public Service Board when they took office. Childe has been in private business as a transportation consultant.

The President has not designated the board chairman, but was expected to do so shortly. Meanwhile, Webb said, the board would affect a preliminary organization before setting up permanent headquarters here.

Irregular Moves Mark Sluggish Market; Preferred Issues Show Notable Strength

New York, Aug. 22.—Bidding props were present for an assortment of favorites in today's stock market but the general run of leaders struggled unsuccessfully to attract even modest support.

While weakness was a rarity in most departments, declines of fractions predominated at the close and numerous issues were unchanged. Definite trends were lacking at the start. A few strong spots, mainly among senior stocks, cropped up in the final hour.

Dealings were slack throughout, but in a way, this was comforting to bullish forces. Transfers of 362,000 shares were the smallest for a full session since July 1 and compared with 388,590 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 issues ended at 43.1, its closing level of Thursday. Of 654 individual stocks traded, 249 were down, 201 up and 204 unchanged.

As in previous sessions, fairly cheerful business items aided a number of shares. Merchandising groups especially were helped by estimates of continued heavy retail spending. The drastic curtailment order for 1942 model automotive production stalled the motors.

Start of the usual end-of-week lightening of commitments as a protection against untoward developments in the international situation served as a buying barrier, brokers said. There were continued fears of Far-Eastern upsets and new adverse events in Russia along with worries over mounting governmental industrial controls.

Among advancing stocks Universal Pictures preferred jumped 4 points at 161 and Lehigh Valley Coal preferred ¾ at 13⅛, both new 1941 peaks. Other gainers included Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Paramount Pictures, Pepsi-Cola, Market Street Railway preferred, American Telephone, Richfield Oil and Chesapeake & Ohio.

On the losing side were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Standard Oil (N. J.), U. S. Rubber, Boeing, Du Pont, General Electric, Loew's and Anaconda.

There was more discussion in speculative circles on the theory the industrial activity indicators might have reached a high water mark and soon may show some leveling off. Proponents of this idea cited as a possible straw the figures of Engineering News-Record estimating this week's heavy construction awards at $80,161,000 against the previous week's $91,586,000 and last year's comparative of $128,449,000.

In a narrow Curb slightly better prices were posted for Creole Petroleum; Bell Aircraft and American Gas & Electric. Down a bit were Aluminum Co. of America, International Petroleum, and American Cyanamid. Transactions here were around 93,000 shares against 82,000 Thursday.

Price changes in the main bond list again were mostly in fractions and the trend leaned slightly lower today. A few rails and assorted specialties moved up 1 to 2 points.

Volume fell back to $5,714,000, par value, from $7,404,600 on Thursday. The Associated Press average of 20 rails lost .3 of a point and the 10 foreign issues yield .4 of a point after Thursday's drop of .5. Weakness in Belgian issues were mainly responsible on both days. Other groups in the index were about stationary.

Court Orders Vital Device Sold to All

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Three machine manufacturers were enjoined from limiting the sale and fixing the price of a milling machine part vital to defense industry under terms of a consent injunction decree entered today by Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

The companies, Kearney & Trecker Corporation, Milwaukee, Wis.; Cincinnati Milling Machine Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, and Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co., Providence, R. I., were named in a civil injunction suit instituted by Daniel Britt, head of the Justice Department's Chicago antitrust office.

The suit alleged the three concerns controlled a patent on a vital working part, used widely on metal work in the manufacture of automobiles, tanks and airplanes.

It also alleged that although 20 concerns applied for licenses to manufacture the part since 1923, only three obtained licenses, yet under a German patent obtained by the three defendant companies its free manufacture in Germany was permitted.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 45,525

Detroit, Aug. 22 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc. estimated today that automobile production this week would total 45,525 cars and trucks. Last week's assemblies were estimated at 45,550. Last year at this time, the week's output totaled 23,732 vehicles.

Reductions in one large factory this week were about counterbalanced by gains in several smaller factories just getting their 1942 model output under way.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—Wheat prices tried to rally today, deriving most strength from gains of other commodities such as oats, soybeans, lard, cottonseed oil and cotton, but the market lacked sufficient vigor to maintain maximum gains of about a cent.

At highs of $1.13¼ for September delivery, $1.17 for December and $1.20 for May, which were within fractions of the four-year peaks established last week, the wheat market encountered profit-taking and hedging sales which wiped out most of the laborious gains registered earlier.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ higher compared with yesterday. September $1.12⅝, December 1.16⅝@1.16¾, May 1.19¼@1.19¾; Corn ⅛ off to ⅛ up, September 77⅛, December 81⅛; oats ⅛-⅛ higher; rye ¼@⅝; soybeans 1⅛@2⅝ higher and lard 23@25 higher.

Monday to See Resumption of Sugar Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 22.—The New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange announced today that trading in domestic sugar futures, suspended since a Federal price ceiling of $3.50 a pound was set, would be resumed next Monday.

Transactions were halted August 14, just 48 hours after Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced the maximum "to protect the American public from rampant speculation in sugar which has been pushing prices far above levels justified by large supplies in hand."

Warning Is Issued

In announcing reopening of the domestic futures, the exchange officials said the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply had asked it to say any transaction in excess of the ceiling would be regarded as a violation of its order.

Meantime commodity prices were mixed while traders in the leaders—cotton, wheat and sugar—awaited developments.

Wheat Is Narrow

At Chicago, wheat was unchanged to ⅝ cent a bushel higher after profit-taking cut slightly larger gains. Corn was up slightly to off a shade and oats advanced nearly a cent a bushel.

Wool tops, faced with a strong demand from spot houses, advanced .3 to .8 of a cent a pound.

Coffee futures were mixed, Santos unchanged to nearly 1-10 of a cent a pound higher and Rio losing about an equal amount. Cocoa futures lost ground.

The Associated Press index of 33 cash staples touched another new four-year high at 91.57 per cent of the 1926 average, an advance of nearly half a point from the previous day's 91.13 per cent.

Officials Doubt Nazi Hints Of Slowdown

By Bert Andrews

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Administration officials, their suspicions aroused by the suddenly manifested leniency of the Berlin censors, gave close study yesterday to increasing evidence that a new and deliberate campaign is being conducted by the German government to lull the United States into thinking that it can slow down in its armament program.

Four of many stories passed by the Nazi censors in the last week supply the basis for a growing belief in Washington that the German propaganda strategy now in full swing has two primary objectives:

First, to convince the people of the United States that the Germans themselves have reluctantly come to the conclusion that they must fight all winter on the Russian front; the plan here apparently being to persuade the United States that there is no special hurry in rearming and in speeding arms to Russia and Great Britain.

Second, to take advantage of any letdown in aid by continuing the sledge-hammer offensives against the Russian armies with the aim of destroying them before winter comes, thus freeing the German hosts to turn westward against Britain before the United States wakes up to the need for faster production of planes and tanks and guns.

As a basis for this belief, Washington officials point to the nature of the stories that have been approved by Berlin recently and emphasize that they are all of the type that ordinarily would have been killed promptly at the source.

Stevenson, 71, Dies; Retired GAO Attorney

Faber Stevenson, 71, retired General Accounting Office attorney and authority on postal laws, died unexpectedly yesterday at his home, 3239 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

A veteran of 50 years' Government service, Mr. Stevenson was author of a history of the postal service and of books and phamphlets on its legal aspects, having been connected with the Postoffice Department for many years.

Born near Webster, Pa., son of a Methodist clergyman, Mr. Stevenson came to Washington in 1887, after graduation from Mount Union College, and took a degree in law at Columbian College, now George Washington University.

He joined the Government as a clerk in 1887 and rose to the position of chief clerk and law clerk in the office of the auditor of the Postoffice Department. Later he transferred to the General Accounting Office, retiring in 1939.

Mr. Stevenson was for many years a vestryman of Incarnation Episcopal Church. A Mason, he served for some time as recorder of Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar. When bicycling was at the height of its popularity, he was president of the Century Club.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Monday at the residence, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Victoria Watts Stevenson; a sister, Mrs. Samuel Scrivener, of Washington, and two brothers, Morton W. Stevenson, of Washington, and Ezra R. Stevenson, of Midland, Mich.

Rites Tomorrow For A. R. Speare, Funeral Director

A native of Washington, Mr. Speare was connected with the engineering branch of the District government before becoming a funeral director. He was long prominent in Washington and Maryland Masonic circles.

Mr. Speare leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel Lyddane Speare; a daughter, Miss Marian R. Speare, and a son, Almus R. Speare, jr., now with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Funeral rites will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 206 West Montgomery Avenue, Rockville. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Lieut. Meeks Crashed on Duty At 'Atlantic Base,' U. S. Says

Friend Recalls His Letter Describing Voyage to Iceland

The War Department announced yesterday that Lieut. George E. Meeks, Washington flier, had crashed in line of duty with the Army Air Corps "at an Atlantic base."

The statement tended to confirm the belief of friends that the 27-year-old former Maryland University marksman had been killed serving with the American forces in Iceland.

In a message to the aviator's father, Capt. George C. Meeks, retired Washington fireman, the War Department said the lieutenant's body would be sent here as soon as possible and that more information on Meeks' death would be furnished when available.

Lieut. Meeks was killed August 19. Exactly two weeks before a friend here received a letter from Meeks, written "on the North Atlantic" en route to Iceland.

He had just been promoted to flight commander, Meeks wrote. He had become a full fledged member of the Air Corps a year ago last May.

"All our preparations are now about to face their ultimate test," the letter read. "It's the real thing for us." Then Lieut. Meeks went on to describe a dangerous and pioneering air maneuver being tried by his command.

"We are in a convoy, a little expedition to a far north battle zone," Lieut. Meeks continued. "I'm proud as punch to be one of the top men of the absolutely first outfit to go into what promises to be real action.

"There's been excitement—fog, storms, ships ramming whales and cold weather. Snow and ice in August, and most of us southerners. It was black as night when we left Norfolk, and on deck with the ship blacked-out you couldn't see two inches. Now we still blackout the ship, but the sky doesn't cooperate. It stays light."

This morning we passed through the area where the Bismarck sank the Hood. We know Jerry is here. All morning we passed oil drums, rafts, lifejackets and even unexploded mines."

"The scouting planes saw evidence of a recent sinking. In one place they saw bits of motor boats, oil, life vests, wreckage and such on the surface. That was southeast of here, and you can bet we are all on the alert."

Nudists to Bare All at 'Trial' In Camp

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, N. J., Aug. 22.—More than 350 nudists opened the tenth annual convention of the American Sunbathing Association today as Ronald Jump, public relations man, told a press conference nudism was gaining everywhere in the country except the South.

"The South is still solid against us," he declared, "but we do have a camp in North Carolina."

Jump said an entertainment tomorrow night would be a mock trial, "Your Honor, I Object," and gave this synopsis:

Carl Easton Williams, of Cambria, Calif., president of the association, said in his annual report to members today:

"To the nudist, it does not matter a continental whether one is dressed or undressed when in the company of like-minded, clean-minded people. Actually there is no virtue in being naked, just as there is no virtue in being clothed.

"People think that the fig leaf is the badge of decency, but actually it signifies indecency of mind. The real, spiritual value of nudism lies in the fact that we have gained utter freedom from the shame complex.

"Beyond that, we have escaped from the incessant mental preoccupation with sex that characterizes the conventional person, who goes about stinking and hiding through life because more or less unconsciously he is ashamed of himself."

A feature are the badges without which no convention is complete. They are worn about the neck, in the shape of a bear holding a 1941 banner, the badges carry the words sister bare or brother bare and a place for the delegate's name and his club.

Communications Plant Visitors To Be Restricted

The Defense Communications Board called upon the communications industry yesterday to restrict access to plants to officials, employes and others considered necessary by the management in the conduct of the business.

Chairman James L. Fly made public without comment a resolution adopted by the board.

The resolution said that because of the importance to national defense of the plants and facilities of the industry, including manufacturing, it appeared desirable to restrict access to them.

All persons engaged in the wire and radio communications industry were requested to exclude representatives of any foreign government, persons, associations or corporations from premises containing communications equipment except upon express permission from the Defense Communications Board.

Rites Today For Matthews, D. C. Principal

Funeral services for Samuel D. Matthews, 55, who died Tuesday at his home, 1811 First Street Northwest, will be at 1:30 p. m. today in the Zion Baptist Church. Interment will be in the Harmony Cemetery.

Principal of the Randall Junior High School, Mr. Matthews had been connected with the public school system here for 33 years. A native of Washington, he was a graduate of the Miner Normal School, the Howard University College of Liberal Arts and Law School, and held a master's degree in education from Columbia University.

He was first appointed as a public school teacher in February, 1908. Since that time, he had served 21 years as a teacher, one year as a teaching principal, and six years as an administrative principal, all in the elementary schools. He was appointed to head the Randall school in June, 1936.

Active in many educational and civic organizations, he served as chairman of the board of the Southwest Community House, as an officer of the Southwest Civic Association, and as treasurer of the Teachers Benefit Annuity Association. He was a trustee of the Zion Baptist Church for 21 years.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Florence Matthews, a son, Reginald Matthews, and a daughter, Lucretia Matthews, all of Washington; and two brothers, Albert Matthews, of Weldon, N. C., and Ziphonzo Matthews, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Car Washer Held As 'Dangerous Spy'

New York, Aug. 22.—Fuke Hard Dierken, 35, a German-born car washer, was arrested today in Brooklyn on a charge of failure to register as a foreign agent. James D. Saver, assistant United States attorney, described him as "one of the most dangerous German spies rounded up in the country."

According to Government sources, Dirken acted mainly as a gatherer of information on shipping routes and departures, thus affording valuable tips for Nazi submarines.

Army Extends Merit Basis Of Promotions

In a move designed to give the Army "more vigorous leadership," the War Department yesterday extended to all officer grades its policy of giving temporary promotions on the basis of merit, rather than seniority.

Both Reserve and Regular Army officers now holding rank as second lieutenants may be selected for promotion to the temporary grade of first lieutenant, it was announced, while first lieutenants of both components may be advanced, regardless of seniority, to the temporary grade of captain.

Regular Army captains also may be moved up on the selective basis to temporary ranking as majors. Two months ago promotion of Regular Army lieutenant colonels to the temporary grade of colonel was begun.

Selective promotions will not be made, the department stated, except after close observation of officers' performance "under the pressure of the existing emergency."

With extension of the selective promotion policy to all grades of Regular Army officers, the department said it expects "to remove inequalities" between the present rate of advancement of regular and reserve officers.

Normal peacetime promotion of Regular Army officers will continue, as well as permanent promotions for reserve officers on active duty.

Commissioners, Camalier to Confer On Road Contracts

Renah F. Camalier, special advisor to the Senate District Committee, today will confer with the District Commissioners and highway authorities on recent charges of irregularities in awards of street-paving contracts.

Camalier was invited by the Commissioners to meet with them and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst to go over all records pertaining to paving specifications and contract bids.

Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee has announced a Congressional investigation of the highway department will be made as a result of charges by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren.

Warren alleged certain bids were "unbalanced and loaded" and that there was close to an "even division" of work among four major contractors here. The charges were emphatically denied by the Commissioners.

Listen! with Glynn

With "the dramatization of that famed old fairy tale, "Rumpelstiltskin," by the Brothers Grimm, one of the Columbia network's oldest programs celebrates its eleventh birthday today. It's "Let's Pretend," acted by and for children, and heard over WJSV at noon every Saturday.

There are no pretensions about "Let's Pretend." It's just simple dramatizations of the best-known fairy tales. For instance, "Snow White" has been produced 12 times; "Cinderella," 11; Beauty and the Beast," 10; "The Sleeping Beauty," nine, and "Rumpelstiltskin," nine times before this.

But, as is frequently the case with more pretentious radio shows, the popularity of "Let's Pretend" has never been questioned, and faithfully, week in and week out, it receives thousands of letters from children throughout the country asking for more.

Outside of the satisfaction it gives an assured audience, "Let's Pretend" has other things to its credit. It's responsible for producing more finished child actors than any other radio series you can mention. It was on "Let's Pretend" that Nancy Kelly, now of the movies, got her acting start; ditto the Mauch twins; ditto Billy Halop, of the "Dead End Kids." Patricia Ryan, star of CBS's "Claudia," now 19, also started out on the series 11 years ago.

Uncle Sam Houses His Workers

FRANK EASKE, lathe operator at the Naval Torpedo Plant, used to be crowded into a Massachusetts Avenue flat with his wife and daughter. Now he can relax in the living room of a brand-new two-bedroom family "dwelling unit," out of the heat and rush of the city, for he lives in the Navy's new 300-family Chinquapin Village erected in Alexandria for torpedo plant workers.

The Easke family is only one example among the defense and Government workers that, it is estimated, have been pouring into Washington to a total of 60,000 since June, 1940. And Chinquapin Village is only one example of the efforts that the Government is making to provide adequate housing for them.

Statistics show that Government agencies have already provided new homes for 935 Government and defense workers, and have facilities projected for about 3000. But Chinquapin Village and the Easke family give a much more vivid picture of the enormity of the problem, and the way in which it is being handled, than do the statistics.

THE Village already has 290 of its 300 units occupied, although workmen are still grading and finishing off the lawns, courts and streets. The "units" are arranged two to a house, and the houses are blue or green-shuttered white frame buildings. Frank Easke and his neighbors all are machinists in the torpedo plant, and have an average income of about $1800 a year each. They pay a monthly average rental of less than $30, for houses that are unfurnished, heated by gas, and are equipped with electric refrigeration.

Instead of using city streets, 12-year-old Ruth May Easke may now play with other children of all ages in spacious courts around which the buildings are grouped. And Mrs. Easke can gossip cross-court with her neighbors, entertain, or simply relax after housework is done in the neat and tastefully furnished little home. When the grading is done, Frank Easke, who works on a 4-12 p. m. shift, will have time to work about the house and to fix up a lawn and flower beds.

ALTOGETHER Federal agencies are building or planning to build 20 such housing projects through the District and vicinity. The need for them has been surveyed by the Housing Coordination Office, and its recommendations sent to the President for approval.

The Federal Works Administration, under the direction of John M. Carmody, is in charge of the public housing problem, and selects the construction agency for each project. Construction is done through such agencies as the United States Housing Authority, the Alley Dwelling Authority, the Public Buildings Administration, and the Farm Security Administration. The Navy Department is in direct charge of two projects, Chinquapin Village and Bellevue, the latter a 600-family settlement for enlisted men and civilian Navy Yard employes near Bolling Field.

Qualifications for residence in USHA-aided projects fix maximum incomes (not more than $1320 for a family with two children and not more than $1584 with three children), require a year of residence in the city before application and with six months of that time spent in substandard or over-crowded living quarters. It is necessary, also, to be an American citizen.

ALTHOUGH almost all of the projects are for married couples and families, the myriad of young and single girls flocking into the Government service have not been forgotten. Among the buildings is to be a 150-unit dormitory-hotel for single girls employed by the Government.

The houses are going up here, in Alexandria, in Arlington, Falls Church, Cabin John, Greenbelt and Cheltenham, Md. There are homes of brick and of frame construction, for enlisted personnel and for civilian workers, for white and for Negro families.

"We are going to help rid Washington of all substandard dwellings," says John Ihlder, executive head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, speaking for his agency. "National defense housing fits into this program as it results in low-rent dwellings for defense workers who otherwise would overcrowd existing dwellers, and so cause rapid deterioration."

"We are in a very real sense contributing to the defense of the Nation," adds Administrator Carmody. "And we intend to do a first class job."

IHLDER announced yesterday that the ADA has signed a $1,288,602 contract for the construction of 350 houses at Highland Dwellings. The project will house civilian Navy Yard workers and will be on a tract bounded by Atlantic and Eighth Streets and Condon Terrace Southeast.
